Engine Test Firing Successful

. . . All Systems Working Properly For Landing On The Moon

Space Center, Houston (AP) — A successful firing of the Apollo 15 main rocket engine Tuesday cleared the spacecraft to continue toward a moon landing. The astronauts then checked their lunar module and found a small glass shattered on a radar meter.

Mission Control announced later the meter was working normally, despite the broken glass, but also said experts would make further checks.

Apollo 15 commander David R. Scott and astronaut James B. Irwin used sticky tape and a vacuum cleaner to clean up the shards of glass.

An official said the space below the meter glass normally contains helium gas under pressure and that without the gas the meter must operate in the atmospheric pressure of the cabin and later, on the moon's surface, in a vacuum. They said they would conduct further tests Wednesday to make certain that this would not present any problem.

The tests will indicate whether or not the astronauts can rely on the meter but even if it becomes apparent that the meter won't operate properly with the glass broken, officials said the mission would not be affected. Other displays in the lunar module can provide the same information as the meter.

Earlier in the day the astronauts made a test of the command ship's main rocket engine. It worked all right and Scott exclaimed: "Let's go to Hadley!" Hadley Rille borders the moon mountain valley where Scott and Irwin will touch down.

Flight controller Glenn Lunney said before the test that if one of the electrical circuits to the engine proved faulty then Apollo 15 would not land on the moon. Instead, he said then, the astronauts would have conducted lunar studies from moon orbit.

But the firing test was successful and the astronauts made plans to enter the still attached lunar module later Tuesday and prepare the craft they call Falcon for its descent on the moon's surface on Friday.

The red light came on unexpectedly after the spacecraft left earth's orbit and began its long coast toward the alien land of the moon.

The light behaved erratically, mysteriously flashing on and off. Scott discovered he could make it go out by tapping at the top of the switch. The light, which normally indicates the rocket engine is armed and ready to be fired, could be turned off by turning a switch to neutral.

The fact that the rocket engine did fire, officials explained earlier, means that the electrical short is probably in the engine monitoring system and not in the engine itself.

Apollo 15's landing would have been canceled if one of the electrical circuits had been faulty, officials said, because this would have removed a margin of safety for the astronauts. The rocket engine, called the service propulsion system — SPS — must work for the astronauts to break free of moon orbit and return home after a lunar surface exploration.

Officials said the spacecraft is designed with two circuits powering the rocket engine so that should one circuit fail, the second one could be used to free the engine and push the spacecraft out of lunar orbit. However, mission rules forbid the astronauts from entering a critical situation with only one of the circuits operating. A moon orbit mission, without a landing, would have been permitted because the astronauts could have used the descent engine of the lunar module to break out of lunar orbit if the SPS had failed.

The one-second rocket firing came at 2:14 p.m. EDT while Apollo 15 was about 128,000 miles from the moon.

A few minutes after the successful rocket firing, Allen told the astronauts Mission Control was very pleased with the burn.

He said the firing aimed Apollo 15 so accurately at the moon that two later course correction firings would not be needed.

The speed of Apollo 15, which reached more than 24,000 miles as it left earth orbit on Monday, has gradually declined since as earth's gravity fights to pull the spacecraft back. The moon's gravitational force will gain control early Thursday and the craft's speed will slowly increase as the moon pulls it forward.

State Net Plans TV High School

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

The Nebraska Educational Television Commission was told Tuesday that the state ETV network plans to broadcast this fall a "TV high school" formerly broadcast only in the metropolitan Omaha area.

Network education coordinator Dick Raecke said the program would offer a "diploma by TV" to a potential audience of nearly 200,000 Nebraskans.

That figure, Raecke told the commission at its regular monthly meeting, would represent half of the total number of Nebraska citizens who do not now have high school diplomas.

After the meeting, Raecke said the programs will give Nebraskans an opportunity to study, by television, for the GED (high school equivalency) tests.

Although all the details have yet to be finalized, Raecke said the high school broadcasts would probably be scheduled two evenings a week starting in September.

He said details would be finalized by mid-August.

The program, he said, will probably involve establishment of testing centers throughout the state operated with the cooperation of the State Department of Education, which has worked jointly to develop the project.

A similar program has been offered in the past through MOEBA, the Omaha area ETV broadcasting agency.

In other matters Tuesday, the ETV Commission set Aug. 24 as the date for a meeting to take action on budget requests for 1972-73 and formally approved the operating budget for the 1971-72 fiscal year.

The latter action was taken last month by voice vote. But the commission decided to seek an attorney general's opinion on whether such actions ought to be confirmed by roll call vote.

Commission Secretary Jack McBride said the state attorney general's office had suggested the commission take roll call votes on any business item which involved an expenditure of funds.

The commission was also told that Nebraskans for Public Television, a nonprofit corporation formed as a "friend of Nebraska ETV," is now seeking memberships.

McBride said the organization plans to institute programs which the commission cannot do because of legal restrictions or lack of funds.

He said, as an example, the organization hopes to publish a monthly program guide to replace the guide which was discontinued by the commission in the face of a strict budget.

The commission also:

—decided to investigate possible ways to cut costs on newly required equipment for monitoring its three remote control stations.

—okayed an expenditure of $92,376.41 for furniture for the new state telecommunications building.

—voted to update an application to the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare for nearly $600,000 in production equipment for the new building.

36 High School Students Study Ecology Of Platte

By IVAN TRAVNICEK
Star Staff Writer

Spread out along the lazy Platte River near Ashland, 36 high school juniors from across the United States are conducting a major ecological study sponsored by the National Science Foundation and Nebraska Wesleyan University.

The purpose of the program is to provide an opportunity for the students to learn how this type of study is conducted and to contribute results to this study, a NWU bulletin said.

Instructional staff member Dr. Marvin A. Bichel, a professor of biology at NWU, said a site along the Platte where the Salt Creek empties was selected so that the effects of pollution could be studied both upstream and downstream from Salt Creek.

National Guard Camp

The site is on U.S. government property north of Ashland and is used as a National Guard training camp. Bichel said the group was fortunate that it was able to get permission to work in the area because it is the spot where polluted Salt Creek empties into the Platte River.

Bichel said the six-week study has been broken down into four parts:

—one week to review basic chemistry and an introduction to needed analytical methods,

—two weeks for an introduction to field biology with an emphasis on the ecology of a river system,

—two weeks of independent study of specific ecological problems, and —the last week for organization and correlation of data and for a write-up and presentation of information gathered during the independent study period.

During the independent study period the students are working either singly or in pairs or trios, Bichel said. Larry Forsley, 16, of Manchester, Mass., and Jon Wurl, 17, of Tomahawk, Wis., were eagerly taking soil samples 50 feet apart along a straight line. The line ran about a quarter mile inland, starting at the Platte River bank below Salt Creek, they said.

They said they will analyze the soil for its water-holding capacity, for microbes, phosphates, nitrates, nitrites, acidity and organic matter content. In addition, they said, they will record what grows and what doesn't grow in each location.

A trio of girls, Susan Lavine of Superior, Wis., Linda Bergofsky of Baltimore, and Dessa Pence of Chicago, all 17, were busy at work analyzing the effects of sewage on the Platte River flood basin. While Linda and Dessa were taking soil and water samples for analysis, Susan was taking bore samples of trees located both above and below the Salt Creek outlet to determine the growth rate of trees and if there is any discernable difference in the growth rates due to pollution from Salt Creek.

Wurl thought the overall program was "a lot better than I expected." He said it was more scientific. Forsley, his partner, said the program was "not quite what I expected." But he said he had been on similar programs for two years already.

Linda Bergofsky said she was "very pleased with the program" and that "the professors and dorm leaders really know how to relate to the kids."

Dessa Pence said, "I like it, but I didn't know what to expect." She said she was "learning more than I ever did in school."

Another group was found far out in the river on the edge of a large sandbar. This group, led by Tom Creighton, 21, a senior at NWU, was taking depth readings of the river and measuring the velocity of the water to see how it affects the depth and shape of the river.

He said they were studying how sandbars affect the channel and how the channel affects the sandbars. He said this would be valuable information if the river was ever rechanneled.

Gail Miller, 17, of Decatur, Ill., and Randy Fritz, 16, of Pueblo, Colo., were helping Creighton sharpen sighting stakes so a straight line across the river could be measured. Creighton then waded out into the river with a measuring pole to take depth and velocity measurements.

Dr. Paul H. Laursen, professor of chemistry at NWU, the director of the project, said there were 36 students in the project.

Laursen gave the names of those from Nebraska as:

Stephen Dager of Columbus, Pamela Davis of Dannebrog, Robert Grosserode of Lincoln, Gary Hall of Elmwood, Cindy B. Jameson of Amherst, Leon Marquart of Byron and Donald Sejkora of Grant.

Other Revenue Sources Needed, Marvel Claims

. . . TO HOLD SALES-INCOME TAX LEVELS

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings Tuesday said the Legislature must "find some other sources of revenue" if it hopes to hold 1973 sales-income tax rates at 1972 levels.

The only alternative is to cut back on state services, the Appropriations Committee chairman noted.

Tax rates for 1972 will be set later this year, but they essentially will remain at the current level of 2½% sales and 13% personal income.

The only possible change is a one per cent hike in the income tax levy.

To Hold Budget

Gov. J. James Exon has said he will hold his 1972-73 fiscal year budget recommendation to the 1972 Legislature within the tax rates established for the 1972 calendar year.

Marvel said he too is "in hopes of holding the sales and income tax rates" at those levels, but the state will be facing a "very serious" financial squeeze.

"We're not going to have the reserve or surplus we had last time," he noted.

Revenue Lags

And revenue estimates which influenced budgetary decisions at the beginning of the 1971 Legislature have fallen about $5 million short, Marvel said.

"It's going to be very tight."

Marvel declined to suggest other sources of revenue at this time.

Preliminary work has already begun on the 1972-73 budget.

"All of the background must be laid before January. It has to be or we can't get the job done in 60 days," Marvel said.

60 Days

The 1972 Legislature is limited to 60 days in session by the constitutional change which inaugurated annual sessions. That will be the shortest regular session since 1885.

"We must take advantage of all the budget experience in the state to make it," Marvel noted.

The legislative and executive budget staffs have already held two-day meetings with state college officials at Chadron, Kearney and Wayne and will meet with Peru officials Thursday.

Participate

Marvel and Appropriations Committee members from each area have participated in one day of each meeting.

"We're sitting, listening, asking questons," Marvel said. The full committee will visit the institutions again for formal sessions in September, he said.

The meetings are designed to "get the initial feel for what problems may be in the current budget and what problems they face for the next budget," he said.

Join In Sessions

Gus Lieske, Gov. Exon's director of administrative services, and Marin Rein, legislative fiscal analyst, have participated in each session.

Five committee members also joined Lieske and Rein in a meeting with University of Nebraska officials earlier this month to discuss the university's current budget.

That meeting was at the university's request.

"They wanted to show us how they proposed to spend the money budgeted to them," Marvel said. "They wanted to tell us where they follow legislative intent and where they deviated."

Rasonably Satisfied

Based on that brief report, Marvel said, "so far I am reasonably satisfied" with the university's actions.

But program budgeting assigning appropriations by specific program — is necessary if the university is to have any long-range planning, Marvel said.

"The only way you can plan is through the budget."

Hodgson Requests Binding Arbitration

By United Press International

Labor Secretary James D. Hodgson asked the nation's railroads and the striking United Transportation Union Tuesday to submit their contract dispute to binding arbitration.

His request came as President Nixon was urged to take "immediate government action" to halt the national strike against four railroads, but White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler said "there are no plans at this time" to propose strike-ending legislation.

Hodgson's proposal to create a three-member arbitration panel to determine terms of a new contract was made the day after negotiations between the two sides collapsed and were recessed indefinitely.

More Strikes Planned

The UTU has tied up about 20% of the country's rail network wtih strikes against the four carriers, and has scheduled walkouts against six more lines Friday and five others a week later.

Although Ziegler said the administration has no plan now to seek back-to-work legislation, a rejection of Hodgson's proposal could prompt the administration to ask Congress to impose on the railroads and union the contract terms recommended last year by a White House commission.

The Labor Department is preparing such legislation as a contingency, but apparently withholding it pending labor-management consideration of Hodgson's plea. The labor secretary gave both sides until Wednesday morning to announce their decisions, but there was no immediate response.

No Power

The executive branch has no power to require such binding arbitration, but the carriers agreed to accept it last year when it was proposed by the National Mediation Board as a normal step under the Railway Labor Act which governs collective bargaining in the rail and airline industries. The UTU, however, would not agree.

"Obviously, it is imperative that extraordinary steps be taken to resolve the dispute that has caused these severe dislocations (in moving commerce)," Hodgson said in telegrams to UTU President Charles Luna and Chairman John P. Holtz of the National Railway Labor Conference, the bargaining agency for the carriers.

The administration, Hodgson said, supports free collective bargaining, as well as the right of unions to strike, but he said, "we are concerned that those rights be exercised with due regard for the public interest."

Hodgson recommended setting up "a panel of three distinguished neutral experts to be selected either by the parties or appointed by the president.

Operations Suspended At Hiram Scott College

Scottsbluff (AP) — The financial struggle of Hiram Scott College entered a new phase Tuesday as the college president, Dr. Walter E. Weese, and the chairman of the board of trustees, Dr. C. N. Sorensen, said the school will suspend normal operations as of Aug. 14.

They explained the action was being taken as an alternative to a final shut down of the four-year liberal arts institution and disposition of its assets.

Dr. Weese said during the suspension period, a minial staff will be retained in preparation for the subsequent reopening of the school. He indicated the staff may include from three to six persons.

Some 20 staff and faculty members will be terminated as of Aug. 31 with all clerical and maintenance personal to be terminated the same date.

Throughout the period of suspension, Dr. Sorensen said, the best advisors available will be called upon to design and implement a new institution of highest quality education.

Both confirmed the suspension will be indefinite, but indicated it may be as short as one year or could last longer.

All avenues of higher learning would be explored during the suspension period, said Dr. Sorensen, ranging from the possibiltiy of a one-year vocational school to a four-year institution restricted to graduate education.

Also mentioned was the possibility of a four-year state supported program.

The probability that Scott, although not necessarily bearing that name, would never reopen, should not even be considered," said Dr. Sorense.

He said the facility is so well designed that some type of educational program will be forthcoming.

The Hiram Scott student body reportedly accepted the announcement with restraint, with the general feeling the announcement was expected.

The school opened its doors in the fall of 1965 as a four-year liberal arts institution.

However, in December 1970, school officials announced to the public, they were suffering severe financial difficulties and subsequently declared bankruptcy.

3-Ton Truck, Bike Collide; Boy Is Dead

Fremont (AP)—The state patrol identified a boy killed in a truck–bicycle mishap in Fremont Tuesday as David Eugene Ishmiel, 6.

The patrol said the names of the boy's parents were not immediately available.

The report said a bicycle which Ishmiel was riding collided with a three-ton truck, at an intersection on U.S. 275, driven by Clarence Teadtke, 62.

The patrol said the truck was northbound at the time of the accident.

The death raises the state's 1971 traffic fatality toll to 224, compared with 230 at this time one year ago.

Hodgson Requests Binding Arbitration

By United Press International

Labor Secretary James D. Hodgson asked the nation's railroads and the striking United Transportation Union Tuesday to submit their contract dispute to binding arbitration.

His request came as President Nixon was urged to take "immediate government action" to halt the national strike against four railroads, but White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler said "there are no plans at this time" to propose strike-ending legislation.

Hodgson's proposal to create a three-member arbitration panel to determine terms of a new contract was made the day after negotiations between the two sides collapsed and were recessed indefinitely.

Although Ziegler said the administration has no plan now to seek back-to-work legislation, a rejection of Hodgson's proposal could prompt the administration to ask Congress to impose on the railroads and union the contract terms recommended last year by a White House commission.

The Labor Department is preparing such legislation as a contingency, but apparently withholding it pending labor-management consideration of Hodgson's plea. The labor secretary gave both sides until Wednesday morning to announce their decisions, but there was no immediate response.

No Power

The executive branch has no power to require such binding arbitration, but the carriers agreed to accept it last year when it was proposed by the National Mediation Board as a normal step under the Railway Labor Act which governs collective bargaining in the rail and airline industries. The UTU, however, would not agree.

"Obviously, it is imperative that extraordinary steps be taken to resolve the dispute that has caused these severe dislocations (in moving commerce)," Hodgson said in telegrams to UTU President Charles Luna and Chairman John P. Holtz of the National Railway Labor Conference, the bargaining agency for the carriers.

The administration, Hodgson said, supports free collective bargaining, as well as the right of unions to strike, but he said, "we are concerned that those rights be exercised with due regard for the public interest."

Hodgson recommended setting up "a panel of three distinguished neutral experts to be selected either by the parties or appointed by the president.

Operations Suspended At Hiram Scott College

Scottsbluff (AP) — The financial struggle of Hiram Scott College entered a new phase Tuesday as the college president, Dr. Walter E. Weese, and the chairman of the board of trustees, Dr. C. N. Sorensen, said the school will suspend normal operations as of Aug. 14.

They explained the action was being taken as an alternative to a final shut down of the four-year liberal arts institution and disposition of its assets.

Dr. Weese said during the suspension period, a minial staff will be retained in preparation for the subsequent reopening of the school. He indicated the staff may include from three to six persons.

Some 20 staff and faculty members will be terminated as of Aug. 31 with all clerical and maintenance personal to be terminated the same date.

Throughout the period of suspension, Dr. Sorensen said, the best advisors available will be called upon to design and implement a new institution of highest quality education.

Both confirmed the suspension will be indefinite, but indicated it may be as short as one year or could last longer.

All avenues of higher learning would be explored during the suspension period, said Dr. Sorensen, ranging from the possibiltiy of a one-year vocational school to a four-year institution restricted to graduate education.

Also mentioned was the possibility of a four-year state supported program.

The probability that Scott, although not necessarily bearing that name, would never reopen, should not even be considered," said Dr. Sorense.

He said the facility is so well designed that some type of educational program will be forthcoming.

The Hiram Scott student body reportedly accepted the announcement with restraint, with the general feeling the announcement was expected.

The school opened its doors in the fall of 1965 as a four-year liberal arts institution.

However, in December 1970, school officials announced to the public, they were suffering severe financial difficulties and subsequently declared bankruptcy.

3-Ton Truck, Bike Collide; Boy Is Dead

Fremont (AP)—The state patrol identified a boy killed in a truck-bicycle mishap in Fremont Tuesday as David Eugene Ishmiel, 6.

The patrol said the names of the boy's parents were not immediately available.

The report said a bicycle which Ishmiel was riding collided with a three-ton truck, at an intersection on U.S. 275, driven by Clarence Teadtke, 62.

The patrol said the truck was northbound at the time of the accident.

The death raises the state's 1971 traffic fatality toll to 224, compared with 230 at this time one year ago.

Soviets Ask Sudan To Spare Mahgoub's Life

(c) New York Times News Service

Moscow — Making its first substantive comment on the events following the countercoup in Sudan, the Soviet Union Tuesday appealed to Khartoum officials to spare the life of Communist Party leader Abdel Khalig Mahgoub.

Program To Resume

Dalat, South Vietnam — A controversial program of uprooting tens of thousands of Vietnamese primitive hill-dwelling tribesmen in order to remove them from Communist controlled areas was planned to be resumed. American advisors forced suspension of the program last year after many Montagnard tribesmen were relocated against their will. (More On Page 29.)

Former Minister Executed

Shagara Camp, Sudan — The former Sudanese minister for southern affairs was executed, and the trial of the leader of the illegal Communist Party was abruptly adjourned after he and the state's main witness both said they knew nothing beforehand of last week's coup d'etat.

Embassy To Handle Trip

Washington — Administration officials indicated that preparations for President Nixon's planned visit to Peking are expected to be conducted through China's embassy in Canada. They said it appeared "virtually logical," since Huang Hua, the Communist Chinese ambassador and a specialist in American affairs, arrived in Ottawa last week.

Rocket Firing Successful

Houston — Apollo 15 made a successful firing of its main rocket, whose reliability was in doubt, and confirmed to the three astronauts and mission control that it was an electrical switch that was at fault. The mission's planned flight and landing on the moon will continue on as scheduled. (More On Page 1.)

Scott Changes Stand

Washington — Senate minority leader Hugh Scott broke with the Nixon administration and gave support to proposals to place legislative restrictions on the war-making powers of the presidency. He had previously opposed any war-powers legislation since it would interfere with the president's flexibility in conducting foreign policy.

Request Is Rejected

Washington — Charles Luna, president of the United Transportation Union flatly rejected the Nixon administration's proposal to submit to binding arbitration to end their long, bitter contract dispute and strike with the nation's railroads. There was no immediate response from the railroads on the proposal. (Another Story On Page 1.)

Negative Balance Seen

Washington — The United States may have a negative balance of trade this year for the first time in this century, Secretary of Commerce Maurice H. Stans warned Congress. Growing deficits in raw materials and "low technology" products that are imported matched against static surpluses in agriculture products and high technology goods sent abroad were attributed as his reason. Market For Teachers Is Nearly Nonexistent

By WILLIAM J. WAUGH

Washington (AP) — The World War II baby boom has passed through the nation's public schools and left in its wake the worst job market for teachers since the depression.

No relief is in sight for the next decade, says the National Education Association, predicting that the teacher surplus will double by 1976.

The job situation is so bad that one large Eastern school has sent a letter to elementary education students suggesting they may wish to reconsider teaching as a career.

Overproduction Rising

Unless new jobs are created, says the NEA in a private memo to its staff, overproduction of teachers will reach 100,000 to 150,000 annually. Added to this is that each year 15,000 to 35,000 experienced teachers who quit teaching want to return to school jobs, an NEA official said.

The job picture is further complicated by financially pressed school districts cutting back on programs and the size of their teaching staffs, and by professionals laid off by business and industry turning to the field of education in search of work.

"The situation is completely unlike anything we have faced since the Great Depression of the 1930s," the NEA Research Department said in the memo. "Not only beginning teachers but persons with above average experience and qualifications are unable even to find vacancies for which to apply."

Full Impact Nearing

High school employment also has been hit but the full impact of unemployment probably won't reach that educational level until the mid-70s, said the NEA.

The job pinch is just beginning to be felt at the collegiate level, nonetheless, the Cooperative College Registry, originally formed to find qualified instructors, finds its role changing. Now its looking for jobs.

Mrs. Elizabeth S. Fisher, executive director of the registry, said that of 6,139 persons with doctorates who registered for jobs, 34% were still without work last week. Fourteen of those who found jobs aren't going into teaching.

'Settle For Less'

"Many of these people are having to settle for less," said Mrs. Fisher. "They don't get university level jobs and have to take jobs in junior colleges and high schools and business. In one case the man began driving a taxi rather than teach at a level below his degree."

She said the number of persons with master's degrees still seeking jobs for the start of the school year was even greater, but she had no figures available of applicants and jobs.

Underscoring the bleak outlook, Syracuse University's School of Education sent a letter July 1 to its elmentary education students saying:

"Among our current graduating class, less than half have positions for next year . . . it appears that at least a third of our graduates will not be employed come September. The situation among State University of New York graduates is even worse; in June, less than 30% of the Oswego, Cortland and Potsdam graduates had teaching positions."

As examples of the tight job market in elementary schools, the Syracuse letter noted that among area school districts, one had 400 applicants for six openings; another more than 300 applicants for each vacancy.

"Blame it on the pill or whatever but the cause of all this appears to be a reduction in the birth rate," the letter continued. "Give it some serious thought before you get so far into a program that it's impractical to change . . . We are fairly certain, the situation that confronts us will not go away overnight."

The situation is not confined to New York or any other geographical area. Throughout the United States, teachers are finding job openings few and far between.

Dr. A. C. Murphy, director of placement at the University of Texas, said 60% of the school's 1970-71 graduates had lined up teaching jobs, far above average, but "there is no way a graduate can continue to be selective over such matters as climate, geography and money."

"Only a year ago," said job-hunting Patty Stevenson, a University of California graduate, "they needed elementary school teachers. Now the word is more like, 'forget it — we're not even taking applications."

Roy Archibald, an NEA official in California, said he advised friends to look for jobs in the mountains but "they came back and said they're not hiring out there, either."

In the past, Los Angeles has sent recruiters across the country looking for teachers. Now it has a waiting list with hundreds of names.

Lester G. Wahrenbrock, who hires for San Diego's 6,000 teacher system, said that "our teacher turnover has been reduced at least 30%."

Normally, Wahrenbrock hires between 500 and 700 new teachers each year. This year he expects to hire 200 "at the outside maximum."

"One way of meeting the problem of unemployment is to create more jobs," said the NEA. But it conceded that almost all steps "would cost a great deal of money," and added, "in the present economic situation, it would be unrealistic to hope that any of them may be, at best, more than partially implemented."

The NEA memo said "minimum quality in staffing would have created a demand for 157,000 more beginning teachers in the fall of 1970 than were available then."

Quality in staffing, the NEA said, would include:

—Replacing teachers who do not have at least a bachelor's degree.

—Reducing class size to a maximum of 34 in elementary school or a pupil load of 199 in secondary school.

—Staffing adequately a comprehensive education program, including such services as kindergarten and special education and correcting such deficiencies as misassignment and restoring curricular offerings that have been dropped because of teacher shortages.

South Vietnamese Soldiers Begin Push Into Cambodia

Saigon (AP) — A 1,000-man South Vietnamese task force pushed a new drive in eastern Cambodia Tuesday in one of a series of short sweeps designed to keep the North Vietnamese off balance.

In another development, enemy sappers blew up five U.S. helicopters in a swift, predawn raid on an allied base 30 miles north of Saigon.

Field reports said the new South Vietnamese drive swept to within a rubber plantation town 10 miles inside Cambodia and 90 miles north of Saigon. The South Vietnamese were driven out of Snuol nearly two months ago with heavy casualties.

Setback Rankles

Although that setback still rankles, task force commanders said they did not plan to try to reoccupy Snuol immediately.

Commanders said the operation is one of a series of shortsweeps in eastern Cambodia to keep North Vietnamese forces from infiltrating into South Vietnam.

The task force went into action Monday backed up by another 1,000 infantrymen in reserve. So far, there has been no resistance from the North Vietnamese and the reserves have not been committed.

A field commander said that the enemy could not infiltrate unless supplies were nearby and added: "We are searching for supply caches and supply points."

There are more than 12,000 Saigon troops in Cambodia and officers indicated they would be used for the short drives.

7th Division Sought

One major North Vietnamese unit that long has operated in Eastern Cambodia and in South Vietnam's Tay Ninh Province is the veteran 7th Division.

Elements of two other North Vietnamese divisions also are believed deployed in eastern and northern Cambodia, mostly north of Highway 7, which runs into South Vietnam.

"We want to keep the enemy busy," said one field commander. "We have to provide security for the elections."

The South Vietnamese will vote Aug. 29 for national assemblymen and Oct. 3 for president.

"If they accept contact," said one officer, "they are in trouble because then we hit them with B52 raids and artillery. They are conserving their strength for future purposes."

3 Barges Sunk

The raid on the allied base north of Saigon came little more than 24 hours after three U.S. barges were sunk in Qui Nhon harbor on the central coast by mines believed placed by Viet Cong frogmen.

These attacks, aimed at destruction rather than casualties, could be part of the apparent current enemy tactic to avoid big clashes and concentrate on pin-prick raids against allied installations and population centers

Congressional Hearing Into VEE Epidemic Set

Washington (AP) — Charges that the United States acted too late and with too little to protect American horses from a sleeping sickness that killed thousands of animals in Mexico will be aired at a congressional hearing opening Wednesday.

Rep. Graham Purcell, D-Tex., said he also plans to ask Agriculture Department officials if contingency plans are ready to cope with a potential invasion of a lethal hog disease.

Purcell said a disease called African swine fever is now raging in Cuba and is liable to be carried to Mexico, from where it could follow the horse disease into this country.

No Known Cure

He said there is no known cure for it.

Secretary of Agriculture Clifford M. Hardin announced Sunday an emergency 11-state vaccination program in an effort to set up a barrier against the northward spread of VEE — Venezuelan equine encephalomyelitis.

This disease swept into Texas from Mexico June 29 and has killed more than 1,300 Texas horses and sickened another 1,800. Animals in Texas and surrounding states are being vaccinated.

"This will give us a barrier of vaccinated horses reaching across the entire Mexican border and up the Gulf Coast," Hardin said. "We have high hopes the disease will never get out of Texas — that we can stop it there with our expanded vaccination and mosquito-spraying program."

Purcell said in an interview Tuesday that "if it can be halted now, it could have just as easily been halted when it was still in Mexico."

VEE Spread Monitored

He said Agriculture Department scientists monitored the spread of VEE in Colombia and last spring obtained permission to help combat it in Mexico.

"But when they got there, they worked south of where the disease was and no way was ever worked out to get north of it and set up a barrier," Purcell said.

"I think Mexico was somewhat difficult to deal with but I think our people needed to be more insistent in showing how bad it was in Mexico and should have done a better job in protecting them and us," Purcell said.

Both Texas senators have criticized some phases of the handling of the epidemic.

An aide to Republican Sen. John G. Tower said his current position is one of "regretfully understanding" the pressures which delayed release of the vaccine because of uncertainty about possible side effects.

Sen. Bentsen Irked

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, a Democrat whose home is in the hardest-hit South Texas area, has been irked at what he considered Agriculture Department foot-dragging in freeing vaccine when it was obvious the epidemic was not to be stopped at the border.

"They waited until the epidemic had reached 90 miles from the Texas border before they did anything," a Bentsen aide said. Rep. Eligio de la Garza, D-Tex., told a reporter:

"This matter seemed to have had all the obstacles. There was the jumping situation of the mosquito carriers, the fact that there was no licensed vaccine, no funds for research, no funds for spraying and that it involved two countries."

However, he said the secretary of agriculture could have speeded up the availability of the vaccine "by at least a week" when time was a critical factor.

Bank Notes Rise

Washington (AP) — Latin American purchases in the United States financed by the Export-Import Bank reached $1 billion in fiscal 1971, a 33% increase over the figure of five years ago.

He said there is no known cure for it.

Secretary of Agriculture Clifford M. Hardin announced Sunday an emergency 11-state vaccination program in an effort to set up a barrier against the northward spread of VEE — Venezuelan equine encephalomyelitis.

This disease swept into Texas from Mexico June 29 and has killed more than 1,300 Texas horses and sickened another 1,800. Animals in Texas and surrounding states are being vaccinated.

"This will give us a barrier of vaccinated horses reaching across the entire Mexican border and up the Gulf Coast," Hardin said. "We have high hopes the disease will never get out of Texas — that we can stop it there with our expanded vaccination and mosquito-spraying program."

Purcell said in an interview Tuesday that "if it can be halted now, it could have just as easily been halted when it was still in Mexico."

VEE Spread Monitored

He said Agriculture Department scientists monitored the spread of VEE in Colombia and last spring obtained permission to help combat it in Mexico.

"But when they got there, they worked south of where the disease was and no way was ever worked out to get north of it and set up a barrier," Purcell said.

"I think Mexico was somewhat difficult to deal with but I think our people needed to be more insistent in showing how bad it was in Mexico and should have done a better job in protecting them and us," Purcell said.

Both Texas senators have criticized some phases of the handling of the epidemic.

An aide to Republican Sen. John G. Tower said his current position is one of "regretfully understanding" the pressures which delayed release of the vaccine because of uncertainty about possible side effects.

Sen. Bentsen Irked

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, a Democrat whose home is in the hardest-hit South Texas area, has been irked at what he considered Agriculture Department foot-dragging in freeing vaccine when it was obvious the epidemic was not to be stopped at the border.

"They waited until the epidemic had reached 90 miles from the Texas border before they did anything," a Bentsen aide said. Rep. Eligio de la Garza, D-Tex., told a reporter:

"This matter seemed to have had all the obstacles. There was the jumping situation of the mosquito carriers, the fact that there was no licensed vaccine, no funds for research, no funds for spraying and that it involved two countries."

However, he said the secretary of agriculture could have speeded up the availability of the vaccine "by at least a week" when time was a critical factor.

Union Official Appeals For Further Negotiation

. . . Leading To Settlement Of Schuyler Meat Plant Strike

By SAM THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

A striking meat-cutters' union issued a statement Tuesday seeking aid from a private or public third party in bringing the union and Spencer Foods Co. of Schuyler back to the bargaining table.

Jeff Spahn, business agent for the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, Local 106, issued the statement from the union's Lincoln headquarters.

Three days of negotiations in Omaha ended July 11 when the company "was unwilling to alter their position. As a result the union was unwilling as well," Spahn said.

Violence stemming from the strike must be brought to an end, Spahn said, "before we have another Dakota City." His reference was to last year's violence-marred walkout at the Iowa Beef Processors' plant in Dakota City.

Spencer Foods' decision to recruit "strike-breakers from five states," Spahn said, has brought about a "highly volatile situation" resulting in beatings, shootings, vandalism and suspected arson. His statement was accompanied by a list of charges filed in Colfax County Court against strike-breaking employes of Spencer Foods.

"Our intention has been from the beginning to call a non-violent strike," Spahn said. "I'm not trying to paint our members lily-white, but at least no one has accused them of carrying guns around town and shooting at people."

The situation has worsened to the point where Schuyler residents are afraid to walk the streets, he said, and families have been divided, perhaps irreparably, by the intra-community conflict.

The strike has also made Schuyler a "depressed area," Spahn said, whereas the town enjoyed "unprecedented prosperity following the negotiation of the union's first contract.

The economic depression has fallen on Schuyler despite the hiring of non-union workers at the former union scale, he said, because most of them are college students who save their money for school instead of spending it, or "drifters" who move from job to job.

"We feel something must be done for the betterment of the community," Spahn said, as well as that of the company, which union research shows to be losing money at the rate of "a half-million dollars a month." Spencer's two other beef slaughter plants, at Spencer, Iowa, and Sioux Falls, S.D., have been struck since January, as has its processing plant at Hartley, Iowa.

The other three plants have not been operating. Some of their management personnel have been transferred to Schuyler to train non-union employes to keep the Nebraska plant in operation.

Spencer has claimed its production has hit full stride, about 15,000 slaughtered animals a month. Spahn claims its normal production is 22,000 and that the plant has reached only some 6,000 using non-union help, and is not reclaiming all its by-products due to the lack of skilled labor.

'Not Crawling Back'

Spahn emphasized his union's appeal indicates neither weakness nor lack of conviction. "We're not crawling back to the company," he said. "Events have shown that our 240 strikers are united behind the action" and are determined to hold out for a "fair and honorable settlement."

Since the breakdown of talks in Omaha, the union has decided to make one of its demands negotiable: the dating of contracts to make termination dates at all four plants coincide. The company has rejected the demand on the grounds that it would place the union in an unfairly strong bargaining position after the expiration of the contract.

The other main demands of the union remain basically unchanged: higher wages, improved health insurance protection, and rejection of a company-proposed clause that would allow the firm to subcontract certain jobs.

"We're actually not very far apart in actual wages," Spahn said. "I wouldn't exclude further concessions (beyond the expiration-date demand), but there are still a number of issues we're a mile apart on."

"I think the company would like nothing better than to destroy the labor movement within their plants," Spahn said, "but I don't think it's going to happen."

'DON'T WAIT TO DIE'

After 16 heart attacks, climaxed in 1969 by open heart surgery, Tom Connely, 62, of Broken Bow, would seem to qualify as an expert heart patient. His advice to othe, heart patients: "Don't sit down and wait to die. I've helped carry too many of my friends over the hill who did." Forced to retire in 1965, Connely had to make a decision and he says, "I chose to keep busy." Now, in addition to operating two farms and running other enterprises, he has found time to build this log-veneer home. Doing all the rough work himself, he admits, "those 50-pound logs get heavy." When he gets tired, he says, "I knock off and go fishing."

Nine Policemen 'Captivated' By Jammed Lock

Danville, Ill. (AP) — Nine Danville policemen were prisoners in their own squad room in City Hall on Monday after somebody closed a door and the key didn't work.

A spokesman said the men were assembled for a briefing before going on duty. When the door was closed, the lock apparently jammed.

The key failed to unlock the door so the policemen removed the hinge bolts, but to no avail.

Then fellow officers on the other side of the door borrowed a crowbar from the Fire Department. A few thrusts with the bar and the door toppled off its hinges.

The policemen were locked up for about 15 minutes.

Couple Injured In Cycle Mishap

A Lincoln man and an Agnew woman were both listed in "fair" condition early Wednesday morning at Lincoln General Hospital as a result of a car-motorcycle accident on 56th between T and R Sts.

Police Officer Jon Briggs said Frank Buresh, 21, of 5130 Starr, and Lois Jurgensmeier, 20, of Agnew each suffered broken legs when the motorcycle they were riding was in collision with a car driven by Sharon Kindler, 19, of 136 So. 30th, late Tuesday night.

Grain Storage Facilities Are Bulging

By the Associated Press

Western Nebraska farmers continued to scrounge for grain storage this week as the bumper wheat harvest continued and the rail strike persisted.

Many elevators were refusing grain shipments and farmers were having to "make do" with temporary storage, or in some cases storing wheat on the ground.

Dumping of wheat was limited, so far as observers could tell, although the possibility existed that individual farmers were piling the wheat on the ground.

There were reports of 100,000 bushels of wheat on the ground at Oshkosh and about $25,000 on the ground at Julesburg, Colo.

Many farmers along the tracks of the Union Pacific Railroad, which is struck, trucked their grain to the Burlington Northern which also runs through the wheat belt.

Others employed temporary storage constructed in recent years and some even leased ammunition and bomb igloos at the old Sioux Ordnance plant near Sidney, which now houses the Western Nebraska Technical College.

Dalton had some dumping of wheat temporarily because of a broken scale, but the wheat was being picked up this week.

And Mrs. Irene Thompson of Lodgepole solved her grain storage problem in a hurry. She piled about 3,000 bushels of it on the driveway at her home in Lodgepole.

Adding to the worries of the farmers and elevator men is the fact the rye harvest is about to begin, which will add another burden on the available facilities.

State's Wheat Harvest 88 Per Cent Completed

By the Associated Press

Nebraska's wheat harvest is 88% complete for the state as a whole, and virtually complete in all areas of the state except the Panhandle, government crop observers reported Tuesday.

The progress of the harvest was said to be about normal for this time of year.

Row crops, meanwhile, continue in good to excellent condition, according to the weekly review by the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics.

Sixty-four per cent of the corn crop is in the silking stage, compared to a normal of 66%. No significant change in the status of southern corn leaf blight occurred last week, the review said.

Grain sorghum is near normal with heading occurring in most areas.

Soybeans are reported in good to excellent condition with 10% of the plants podding.

The condition of dry beans and sugar beets was described as fairly good.

In another report Tuesday, the statisticians said stocks of feed grain on Nebraska farms as of July 1 were down 16% from last year, with corn stocks the lowest since 1968, and sorghum stocks the lowest since 1958.

The current total of 6,329,000 tons compares with 7,500,000 a year ago.

Corn stocks were estimated at 209.3 million bushels, compared with 232.0 million a year ago.

Grain sorghum stocks were estimated at 10.7 million bushels, compared with 30.8 million a year ago.

Indian Protest, School Firebombing Halt Work On Mission At Winnebago

Winnebago (UPI) — Work was halted in the construction of an addition to St. Augustine's Indian Mission here Tuesday following an Indian protest against hiring at the job site and the apparently related firebombing of the Winnebago school.

The firebombing incident occurred at about midnight Monday but was not reported by authorities until late Tuesday. Considerable damage was caused to the home economics room when the firebombs were thrown through a west window.

Thurston County Sheriff Clyde Storie said his men found fruit jars and pop bottles which had contained gasoline.

A representative of the state fire marshal's office was at the scene Tuesday.

Asked if there was a connection with the labor dispute, Storie said it was "a possibility."

The Sulzbach Construction Co. of Sioux City, Iowa, is handling the work on the mission project in the northeast Nebraska reservation community. Representatives of the firm were not available for comment.

In addition to the firebombing of the school, two haystacks on the Charles O'Gorman farm west of Winnebago containing 14 tons of hay were destroyed by fire Monday night.

Msgr. Frank Sulsman at the mission said work stopped because of "all this dissension."

Monday it was reported over 100 Indians gathered at the construction site to protest what they termed discriminatory hiring practices.

The Indians said they receive $1.65 an hour while other workers received $3.15 an hour.

Complaints Filed

Tuesday, Rueben Snake, of the American Indian movement group here, said at least four persons had filed formal complaints with the Nebraska Equal Opportunities Commission, charging discrimination in hiring on a national origin basis.

A representative of the state commission was in Winnebago Tuesday.

Formal complaints were apparently filed against the construction firm.

In a related development, the entire Winnebago police force of three persons resigned. Two quit at a town council meeting Monday night and another resigned last week. No official reason was given.

The two who resigned Monday were back on their jobs Tuesday night after reaching an agreement with the town council, apparently for the hiring of an added officer.

Thurston county sheriff's officers had been taking over their duties.

General Tribal Meeting Called

Winnebago (UPI) — Reuben Snake, of the American Indian movement group here, late Tuesday said a general tribal meeting of the Winnebago Indian Nation has been called for here Aug. 31.

The strategy meeting is aimed at bringing together members of the governing body of the tribe to discuss problems in the area.

Snake said members of the State Crime Commission, State Indian Commission and Nebraska Equal Employment Opportunities Commission have been invited, along with people from the Aberdeen and Washington offices of the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Union Official Appeals For Further Negotiation

. . . Leading To Settlement Of Schuyler Meat Plant Strike

By SAM THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

A striking meat-cutters' union issued a statement Tuesday seeking aid from a private or public third party in bringing the union and Spencer Foods Co. of Schuyler back to the bargaining table.

Jeff Spahn, business agent for the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, Local 106, issued the statement from the union's Lincoln headquarters.

Three days of negotiations in Omaha ended July 11 when the company "was unwilling to alter their position. As a result the union was unwilling as well," Spahn said.

Violence stemming from the strike must be brought to an end, Spahn said, "before we have another Dakota City." His reference was to last year's violence-marred walkout at the Iowa Beef Processors' plant in Dakota City.

Spencer Foods' decision to recruit "strike-breakers from five states," Spahn said, has brought about a "highly volatile situation" resulting in beatings, shootings, vandalism and suspected arson. His statement was accompanied by a list of charges filed in Colfax County Court against strike-breaking employes of Spencer Foods.

"Our intention has been from the beginning to call a non-violent strike," Spahn said. "I'm not trying to paint our members lily-white, but at least no one has accused them of carrying guns around town and shooting at people."

The situation has worsened to the point where Schuyler residents are afraid to walk the streets, he said, and families have been divided, perhaps irreparably, by the intra-community conflict.

The strike has also made Schuyler a "depressed area," Spahn said, whereas the town enjoyed "unprecedented prosperity following the negotiation of the union's first contract.

The economic depression has fallen on Schuyler despite the hiring of non-union workers at the former union scale, he said, because most of them are college students who save their money for school instead of spending it, or "drifters" who move from job to job.

"We feel something must be done for the betterment of the community," Spahn said, as well as that of the company, which union research shows to be losing money at the rate of "a half-million dollars a month." Spencer's two other beef slaughter plants, at Spencer, Iowa, and Sioux Falls, S.D., have been struck since January, as has its processing plant at Hartley, Iowa.

The other three plants have not been operating. Some of their management personnel have been transferred to Schuyler to train non-union employes to keep the Nebraska plant in operation.

Spencer has claimed its production has hit full stride, about 15,000 slaughtered animals a month. Spahn claims its normal production is 22,000 and that the plant has reached only some 6,000 using non-union help, and is not reclaiming all its by-products due to the lack of skilled labor.

'Not Crawling Back'

Spahn emphasized his union's appeal indicates neither weakness nor lack of conviction. "We're not crawling back to the company," he said. "Events have shown that our 240 strikers are united behind the action" and are determined to hold out for a "fair and honorable settlement."

Since the breakdown of talks in Omaha, the union has decided to make one of its demands negotiable: the dating of contracts to make termination dates at all four plants coincide. The company has rejected the demand on the grounds that it would place the union in an unfairly strong bargaining position after the expiration of the contract.

The other main demands of the union remain basically unchanged: higher wages, improved health insurance protection, and rejection of a company-proposed clause that would allow the firm to subcontract certain jobs.

"We're actually not very far apart in actual wages," Spahn said. "I wouldn't exclude further concessions (beyond the expiration-date demand), but there are still a number of issues we're a mile apart on."

"I think the company would like nothing better than to destroy the labor movement within their plants," Spahn said, "but I don't think it's going to happen."

'DON'T WAIT TO DIE'

After 16 heart attacks, climaxed in 1969 by open heart surgery, Tom Connely, 62, of Broken Bow, would seem to qualify as an expert heart patient. His advice to other heart patients: "Don't sit down and wait to die. I've helped carry too many of my friends over the hill who did." Forced to retire in 1965, Connely had to make a decision and he says, "I chose to keep busy." Now, in addition to operating two farms and running other enterprises, he has found time to build this log-veneer home. Doing all the rough work himself, he admits, "those 50-pound logs get heavy." When he gets tired, he says, "I knock off and go fishing."

Western Nebraska farmers continued to scrounge for grain storage this week as the bumper wheat harvest continued and the rail strike persisted.

Many elevators were refusing grain shipments and farmers were having to "make do" with temporary storage, or in some cases storing wheat on the ground.

Dumping of wheat was limited, so far as observers could tell, although the possibility existed that individual farmers were piling the wheat on the ground.

There were reports of 100,000 bushels of wheat on the ground at Oshkosh and about $25,000 on the ground at Julesburg, Colo.

Many farmers along the tracks of the Union Pacific Railroad, which is struck, trucked their grain to the Burlington Northern which also runs through the wheat belt.

Others employed temporary storage constructed in recent years and some even leased ammunition and bomb igloos at the old Sioux Ordnance plant near Sidney, which now houses the Western Nebraska Technical College.

Dalton had some dumping of wheat temporarily because of a broken scale, but the wheat was being picked up this week.

And Mrs. Irene Thompson of Lodgepole solved her grain storage problem in a hurry. She piled about 3,000 bushels of it on the driveway at her home in Lodgepole.

Adding to the worries of the farmers and elevator men is the fact the rye harvest is about to begin, which will add another burden on the available facilities.

State's Wheat Harvest 88 Per Cent Completed

By the Associated Press

Nebraska's wheat harvest is 88% complete for the state as a whole, and virtually complete in all areas of the state except the Panhandle, government crop observers reported Tuesday.

The progress of the harvest was said to be about normal for this time of year.

Row crops, meanwhile, continue in good to excellent condition, according to the weekly review by the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics.

Sixty-four per cent of the corn crop is in the silking stage, compared to a normal of 66%. No significant change in the status of southern corn leaf blight occurrred last week, the review said.

Grain sorghum is near normal with heading occurring in most areas.

Soybeans are reported in good to excellent condition with 10% of the plants podding.

The condition of dry beans and sugar beets was described as fairly good.

In another report Tuesday, the statisticians said stocks of feed grain on Nebraska farms as of July 1 were down 16% from last year, with corn stocks the lowest since 1968, and sorghum stocks the lowest since 1958.

The current total of 6,329,000 tons compares with 7,500,000 a year ago.

Corn stocks were estimated at 209.3 million bushels, compared with 232.0 million a year ago.

Grain sorghum stocks were estimated at 10.7 million bushels, compared with 30.8 million a year ago.

Indian Protest, School Firebombing Halt Work On Mission At Winnebago

Winnebago (UPI) — Work was halted in the construction of an addition to St. Augustine's Indian Mission here Tuesday following an Indian protest against hiring at the job site and the apparently related firebombing of the Winnebago school.

The firebombing incident occurred at about midnight Monday but was not reported by authorities until late Tuesday. Considerable damage was caused to the home economics room when the firebombs were thrown through a west window.

Thurston County Sheriff Clyde Storie said his men found fruit jars and pop bottles which had contained gasoline.

A representative of the state fire marshal's office was at the scene Tuesday.

Asked if there was a connection with the labor dispute, Storie said it was "a possibility."

The Sulzbach Construction Co. of Sioux City, Iowa, is handling the work on the mission project in the northeast Nebraska reservation community. Representatives of the firm were not available for comment.

In addition to the firebombing of the school, two haystacks on the Charles O'Gorman farm west of Winnebago containing 14 tons of hay were destroyed by fire Monday night.

Msgr. Frank Sulsman at the mission said work stopped because of "all this dissension."

Monday it was reported over 100 Indians gathered at the construction site to protest what they termed discriminatory hiring practices.

The Indians said they receive $1.65 an hour while other workers received $3.15 an hour.

Complaints Filed

Tuesday, Rueben Snake, of the American Indian movement group here, said at least four persons had filed formal complaints with the Nebraska Equal Opportunities Commission, charging discrimination in hiring on a national origin basis.

A representative of the state commission was in Winnebago Tuesday.

Formal complaints were apparently filed against the construction firm.

In a related development, the entire Winnebago police force of three persons resigned. Two quit at a town council meeting Monday night and another resigned last week. No official reason was given.

The two who resigned Monday were back on their jobs Tuesday night after reaching an agreement with the town council, apparently for the hiring of an added officer.

Thurston county sheriff's officers had been taking over their duties.

General Tribal Meeting Called

Winnebago (UPI) — Reuben Snake, of the American Indian movement group here, late Tuesday said a general tribal meeting of the Winnebago Indian Nation has been called for here Aug. 31.

The strategy meeting is aimed at bringing together members of the governing body of the tribe to discuss problems in the area. area.

Snake said members of the State Crime Commission, State Indian Commission and Nebraska Equal Employment Opportunities Commission have been invited, along with people from the Aberdeen and Washington offices of the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM V. SHANNON

(Note: William O. Dobler, The Star's editor, is on vacation. Today's column is by William V. Shannon, of the New York Times.)

NEW YORK — There is a striking difference between the reactions in this country and in China to President Nixon's announcement of his forthcoming visit to Peking. Here there are banner headlines. In Peking, the news of the trip rated seven lines in the leading newspaper. It was accompanied in the press and on the radio by fresh denunciations of the United States.

The contrast between these reactions to the Nixon trip should be enough to alert us to the dangers and difficulties of the negotiation which Nixon has begun. There are no grounds for euphoria.

On the contrary, China retains its ideological pretensions as the one true exponent of Marxist revolutionary doctrine. Those ambitions make Russia its ideological rival and the United States its ideological enemy throughout Asia and the rest of the underdeveloped world.

There are no decisive arguments for keeping China out of the U.N. It is still better to draw China into the world community than to exclude her. But it is only realism to recognize that the arrival of Chou En-lai's man on the Security Council is going to further diminish American influence in the U.N.

China should be afraid of a heavily armed Russia on its northern border, of a potentially rearmed Japan, and of American military action in Laos and Vietnam on its southeastern border. Logically, it should be prepared to pay some political price for friendlier relations with the U.S. which would make it easier to counter the Russian threat and would reduce the other two dangers. But rather than offering concessions, it is demanding them.

China is in a position to make those demands because it sees the U.S. as heavily overcommitted in Asia and seeking a way to cut its commitments. It also sees that Nixon has a losing war on his hands in Vietnam, is under political pressure to extricate himself from the war before November, 1972, and is therefore looking for diplomatic and propaganda victories elsewhere in Asia to distract public attention from a military defeat.

From the standpont of American national interest, it would have been better if Nixon had settled the Vietnam war now and made his approach to Peking after the 1972 election.

Basically, China wants to expel the American military presence from Asia. It could then draw its neighbors into its sphere of influence by the usual techniques of economic aid, political subversion, and military bluff.

In South Korea, we have troops stationed. Our nuclear umbrella shelters Japan. The Seventh Fleet and a military guarantee protect Taiwan. An American army fights in Vietnam. American aid bolsters Thailand and India. Any move Nixon makes in any of these situations sends shock waves through all of the others.

By far the most difficult is Taiwan. China will settle for nothing less than the reannexation of the island. The U.S. could write off Chiang Kai-shek and the mainland Chinese who rule there. But what of our moral obligation to the 12 million native Taiwanese who do not want to pass under communist control and who would like to be free of both Chinese regimes? Will the U.S. permit Taiwan to become the Latvia of Asia?

In reversing his China policy, Nixon has made an act of faith in rationality. He believes that over the long-run, it is better to engage China in a civilized dialogue than to maintain a fixed posture of hostility.

Despite the inevitable stresses and strains, reasonable discourse may make accommodation possible. Everyone hopes that events will justify his act of faith. Surely the effort is worth making. But we court profound disillusionment if we think the way will be easy.

'My Blood Boils To See These People Getting Government Handouts'

Hawaii In December?

City Council action, which experiences the usual summer doldrums, perks up around budget time. One controversial item at present is the $3,000 proposed for the next fiscal year for council members' trips and conferences. The amount represents a 300% increase from the $750 budgeted for the same purpose this fiscal year.

The increase was proposed by council Chairman Dick Hartsock primarily to cover the costs of members to attend the National League of Cities conference which will, as everyone now knows, be held in Hawaii in December. Thus far, a majority of council members are inclined to let the proposed increase stand.

Mrs. Helen Boosalis was the first council member to see the league trip as an excuse to watch the Cornhuskers play football in Honolulu that same weekend and commented: "I'm against taxpayers paying for junkets." Councilman Harry Peterson has received "quite a few statements, not just in jest," from constituents, and says he wants the record to show that he is not going to Hawaii in December for the league's annual conference, nor, we assume, for the football game.

There are other points that should be brought up, however, when judgment becomes colored by football scheduling. One, as Peterson notes, is that the money in the budget can be used for other trips and conferences. Another, as Councilman Merle Hale declares, is that the National League of Cities picked the site for the conference and "they couldn't care less where Nebraska plays football."

In our recent memory, moreover, city officials—mayors, council members or department heads—have at one time or another gone to conferences in Atlanta, New Orleans, San Francisco, Washington and New York, to name only a few pleasure spots, and there was no great hue and cry raised.

The obvious fact is that a great deal can be gained by attending national forums of this sort no matter where they are held. If the council decides, which we hope it does, that Lincoln benefits from its representation in the National League of Cities, then the expenses proposed for the annual conference should be approved. If the council is scared off by a coincidental football game, then the city's membership in the organization is probably not worth anything.

'Economic Justice' Sought

Senate floor spokesmen for the Nixon administration are working against the clock to secure a vote on the Lockheed aid bill so Congress might complete action on the legislation before it recesses on Aug. 6 — a date that must be met, say backers of the nation's largest defense contractor, or Lockheed will go broke.

While the battle to end debate goes on, Sen. George McGovern has proposed an amendment to the bill which would establish a three-man government board with authority to grant $2 billion in loan guarantees to big businesses, including Lockheed, whose collapse could damage the economy of the nation or a region.

In his amendment, Sen. McGovern, who opposes the basic proposal to provide Lockheed and other large corporations with guaranteed loans, would provide an equal amount of federal loan guarantees for small businessmen and small farmers to help "the little man in our economy."

The South Dakota Democrat urged that "in the name of simple economic justice" a similar amount be guaranteed to the "10,000 small businesses across the nation which are in danger of collapsing in this time of inflation-recession." Failure to do this, he said, "may cinch the failure of these companies, for banks will again be encouraged to loan to major corporations, which are protected by the government, rather than to small businesses, which are at the mercy of an unfriendly market-place."

As a means to balance the scales, perhaps the McGovern amendment would be justified —although we don't believe the senator really wants a massive piece of legislation guaranteeing loans to everybody to come to pass. We appreciate, however, his concern that some members of Congress are willing to bail out a large defense contractor or other large corporations with little or no thought to the small businessman or farmer who is not making it.

WALTER CRONKITE

Sharing First Amendment

NEW YORK — The criticism of recent CBS News documentaries, "Selling of the Pentagon" and "Hunger in America," by public officials has been directed at alleged errors in fact or editing. None of the criticism, as far as I have seen, has been directed at the major premise of the two stories — in one case, the expensive and misdirected Pentagon propaganda expenditures, and the other, the fact that untold numbers of Americans are undernourished and many actually are starving.

Our making mistakes is inexcusable, but it is not as serious an offense as that committed by those who would draw red herrings across the trail to hide from the American people the scent of the truth. Another point which some of our critics — most notably the newspapers — either simply cannot see or choose not to see, is this question of the broadcast news under the law.

The eminent Nashville Banner is typical. It proclaims its belief in the First Amendment and the right of free expression — but apparently only for newspapers. For it goes on: "This newspaper would remind, however, that there is a basic difference in this matter of the press . . . and any medium which by the very nature of the case — and the necessity of its periodic licensing — is subject to the will of the FCC, possessed with the power of life or death over it. Reminding Mr. Cronkite, et al, of the constitutional facts of life in no way suggests designs on them on anybody's part. Keeping those facts in focus could, however, take some of the giddiness out of their 'conspiracy caterwauling.'"

Well, that's exactly what the case is all about. For we teeter now on the brink of a communications crisis that could undermine that foundation of our democracy which is a free and responsible press. We all know the economic background of the present situation. We in radio and television, with our greater impact and our numerous outlets, have forced many of our print competitors out of business. It is a rare American city today that has more than one newspaper.

And yet, broadcasting is not an adequate substitute for the newspapers whose demise it has hastened.

If we do our jobs thoroughly, however, we can be a superb monitor on the monopoly newspaper to assure that it does not by plot, caprice or inadvertence miss a major story. We can be, that is, if we are left free to perform that essential journalistic function. The trouble is that we are not free, we are government-licensed.

The power to make us conform is too great to forever lie dormant. The axe lies there temptingly for the use of any enraged administration, Republican, Democrat, Wallacite, New Left.

So we have on one side a monopoly press that may or may not choose to present views other than those of the domineering majority. On the other side, a vigorously competitive but federally regulated broadcast industry.

I can sympathize with the newspapers' attitude toward the broadcast media. They have seen the public swing to a greater acceptance of television news than their print news. They have suffered economically from the advertising competition. Of course, they are unhappy, but I would wish that they could be big enough to support, rather than fight, our right to share the First Amendment guarantees of free expression. I am sorry, too, that some of them have failed to note or have chosen to ignore our acknowledgement of our own limitations in television news, and the essential nature of their print medium.

The Richmond News-Leader, is an example. It said: "If the public insists on approaching network news with the same mesmerized lack of discrimination that it approaches re-runs of 'Gunsmoke,' then Cronkite and company will continue to be regarded as electronic oracles and not as opinionated men with political axes to grind. But if the public refuses to limit its daily intake of news to half-hour, pre-packaged programs, then the power of TV anchormen will fade. If, through other news sources, the public develops the capacity to evaluate properly the golden words of network newscasts, then Walter Cronkite will discover that the public is part of his 'grand conspiracy.'"

Amen. I agree absolutely wholeheartedly with that basic premise.

And let me quote from the same "grand conspiracy" speech: "It disturbs some of us that polls in the United States show that an increasing number are getting most of their news from television—the figure is now well over sixty per cent. This may be inevitable and may not be all bad. We are, as I've said before, reaching people who have been newspaper readers, or at least who have not been thorough newspaper readers, and since newspaper circulations are going up, it can be assumed we are exciting them to seek more information than we can give.

"But that perhaps larger proportion that is limiting its news intake to television is not adequately informed.

"For the long haul it would be well if we worked with our friends of the print media to sponsor courses in high school on how to read a newspaper, how to listen to a radio newscast, how to watch television."

I'm sorry the Richmond paper missed that, in the same speech. Does that really sound as if we believe we are unassailable, beyond criticism?

A Liberal

Lincoln, Neb.

I certainly hope Mr. Rufle (Star, July 21) feels better. Now that he has neatly categorized anyone who cares about others than himself as a guilt-laden, sick "liberal," as he can go on undisturbed with his head buried in the ground, dreaming of an unreal society of Yesterday. Scientific evidence has made it abundantly clear that social problems have social, not individual, origins. Sitting and waiting for "natural" solutions will multiply our problems. Witness our racism problem: The conflict we see is unhealthy for everyone, yet we waited for a hundred years to begin to do anything about it.

Though I eschew labels, Mr. Rufle would surely see fit to label me a liberal. Yes, I perceive that our nation suffers maladies. I also care that we attempt to cope with them to make this country greater. But for the grace of God, any of us, including Mr. Rufle, could be trapped in the shacks of Appalachia, the Harlem ghetto, a reservation of original Americans. We would collectively be better off without these blights; the ideals of America demand that we try to eliminate them. If that course be pathological, then I'm in the wrong country.

Good Music

Lincoln, Neb.

It is indeed high time to stop the cacophonies and in music, return to everlasting, immortal, classic works, as suggested in a letter of July 20. Let's leave the "noise" music to the peoples of the jungle. A cultivated society such as Nebraskans is entitled to something better.

The names of the composers and the pieces presented should be pronounced correctly or not at all. It is a mockery, for example, instead of Chopin to say something more like "Chaplin," or use English pronouncement for French names.

Nowadays much is said about the "media." Often the media men blame others but forget about their own errors.

Outdoor Services

Lincoln, Neb.

We are so sorry that Dr. Bruce Cowgill, of the Nebraska Game Commission, feels he must prohibit religious services in our state parks. These services have been especially beautiful and meaningful to our family and many more families like ours.

Whether it has been in the beauty of Bryce Canyon, Pioneers Park or Ponca State Park, one at least feels close to our Creator as He worships with others in the beauty of God's world.

We especially love these informal gatherings because we all can go just as we are. Nobody is forced to attend any of these services.

In early June, while we were in a cabin at Ponca State Park, we were so pleased that the young boys brought us a little notice telling us of the services.

We would not have to drive into town on Sunday morning to attend church. That is regular routing that we do each Sunday in our home town.

It would be so wonderful if these informal worship services could be continued in our state parks.

Vote Of Confidence

Lincoln, Neb.

I read with great interest your editorial, "In Perspective," which appeared in the Tuesday, July 20 Star. I agree wholeheartedly with your assessment of Senator Stromer's comments.

The League has remained nonpartisan out of concern for the goals of our organization. We do not believe that direct involvement with either political party will serve our purpose.

We still face the long process of establishing statewide credibility. I am certain that your editorial will speed us toward that goal. Thank you for your vote of confidence.

Military Equipment Stolen For Narcotics

WASHINGTON — The Army's drug rehabilitation program at Ft. Bragg, N.C., is in such a shambles that drugs are sold right on the base and $500,000 worth of military equipment was stolen and pawned last year to buy narcotics.

These are the distressing findings of a confidential draft report to the House Commerce Committee by Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., who has just completed an on-the-spot investigation.

Murphy said the program, known as "Operation Awareness," is hopelessly underfunded, undermanned and unsuccessful.

Despite President Nixon's avowed commitment to solve the drug problem, Murphy discovered that there was so little money available to help the GIs at Fort Bragg that the education materials used in the program practically had to be stolen from other facilities.

"In desperation," the congressman says, "the managers of 'Operation Awareness' finally asked the Nixon administration for a minimum of $100,000 to operate the program. They got $31,000."

"Another major method . . . is the practice of many GIs who go to Atlanta, Ga., to purchase 'three spoons' of high-grade heroin which they cut with dilutants. They shoot up half of the drug themselves and sell the other half to addicts on the base.

"The critical increase in the Bragg area drug traffic was pointed out to me by military police who told me that in 1968, in one six-block area of (nearby) Fayetteville, the military narcotic squad purchased three bindles (small containers) of heroin.

"In 1971, in the same area, they were offered a total of 10 pounds of the drug by pushers . . . Enforcement officials . . . frankly admitted it was beyond their control."

☆ ☆ ☆

Murphy found that 80 per cent of the drug patients at Ft. Bragg were enlistees, not draftees. "Their medical records indicate that the reasons for volunteering in the Army ranged from a desire to get away from a bad home situation to making a choice between a prison sentence or going into the service."

One captain told Murphy that "the enlisted men turn on (give pot to) the officers."

The congressman heard harrowing tales of drug use in Vietnam from soldiers who had returned from the war. "One trooper (nicknamed Lee Oswald) claimed he was 'smashed on heroin for 365 days.' He said he did not seek to engage the enemy, on the contrary he avoided contact.

"Two Puerto Rican addicts talked freely of 'fragging' (throwing a hand grenade at) officers who cracked down . . . on them over drug use. A trooper named 'Speedy' Gonzalez told me that he and his buddy fragged two captains in a grass hut."

Murphy concludes that instead of the ineffective military program at Ft. Bragg and other places, drug users in the military should be discharged for physical disability and "turned over to the existing federal programs for treatment and rehabilitation."

Wilson's Reversal On Pro-European Position Netting Him Ridicule And Possible Downfall

LONDON — The question dominating political talk in Britain is whether Harold Wilson, after all his years of careful balancing, is headed now for a great fall. His performance lately has begun to raise doubts about whether he can keep a grip on himself and on the leadership of the Labor party.

Even those who have no personal liking for Wilson are discussing his situation with some sympathy. As this country's leading political commentator, David Watt of the Financial Times, put it, he presents "a tragic spectacle."

Hardly any politician in memory has been so humiliatingly treated in the public prints. In the last few days commentators across the political spectrum have referred to him as a weasel and a man incapable of blushing, accused him bluntly of "prevarication" and called his speeches "demeaning" and "snivelling."

Another reason for sympathy is that he is under severe pressure. The Labor party is hopelessly split on the issue of Britain's joining the European Economic Community. Most of the men on whom Wilson relied as prime minister are pro-European—notably Roy Jenkins, his deputy leader. The party's left and the big trade unions are violently opposed.

But Wilson has brought the trouble on himself. Over the last six months, and with a terrible acceleration in recent days, he has acted on the European issue as if determined to destroy himself.

When he lost the election a year ago, he knew that Europe was going to be a difficult problem for his party. His best hope of holding a dignified position was to say, then, that he would not let defeat change his commitment to British entry. He would have added that of course he had to scrutinize any terms agreed by the Conservative government, but there would be no partisan considerations.

Instead, Wilson followed his habitual practice of lying low for as long as possible and awaiting events. The result was that he became a captive of those events. In the absence of leadership from him, the party fell apart on the European question, and a majority moved into a partisan line of opposition to the government.

Last February Wilson gave the first indication that he was abandoning his pro-European stance. In a party speech he accused the government of seeking "humiliating terms" for entry into the E.E.C. Even then some men who had been close to him in government and knew his private faith in the European adventure could not believe that he would abandon it. They were wrong.

When burdened by a sense of his own failure, Wilson displays characteristic signs. He accuses unnamed people of plotting against him. He blames others for mistakes. He says that those who use his own words against him are quoting out of context. He attacks the press. All these signs have now appeared.

In two major speeches on Europe, to his party and the House of Commons, Wilson devoted pages to proving that his ringing words of the past really meant nothing. He called the community that he so desperately wanted to join a "rule-ridden bureaucracy" and "agricultural welfare complex."

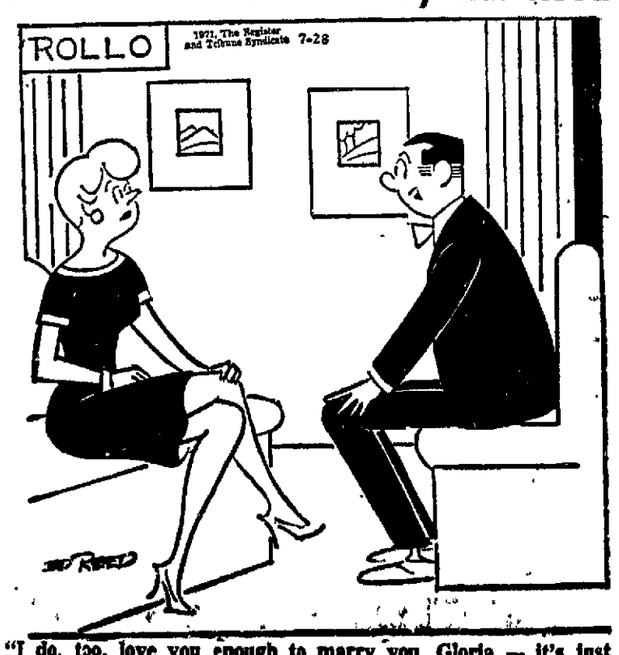

When caught out in a false charge on the floor of the House, he said it was the fault of some clerk or secretary who got a message wrong. He intimated that there was a party conspiracy against him. He denounced the "Tory press."

David Watt calls it a tragedy. But for the Greeks, tragedy required a hero falling from a height. At the moment of Britain's greatest decision in a generation, Harold Wilson is devoting himself to self-justifying pettifoggery. He is not a tragic but a pathetic figure.

In the past Wilson has had great powers of recovery. He retains wide public support, and he may still be the most acceptable leader to various factions in the Labor party. But the pressures are now extreme, and to a significant extent he is generating them himself. Even if he is not pushed, Wilson may fall.

EVENTS

IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM V. SHANNON

(Note: William O. Dobler, The Star's editor, is on vacation. Today's column is by William V. Shannon, of the New York Times.)

NEW YORK — There is a striking difference between the reactions in this country and in China to President Nixon's announcement of his forthcoming visit to Peking. Here there are banner headlines. In Peking, the news of the trip rated seven lines in the leading newspaper. It was accompanied in the press and on the radio by fresh denunciations of the United States.

The contrast between these reactions to the Nixon trip should be enough to alert us to the dangers and difficulties of the negotiation which Nixon has begun. There are no grounds for euphoria.

On the contrary, China retains its ideological pretensions as the one true exponent of Marxist revolutionary doctrine. Those ambitions make Russia its ideological rival and the United States its ideological enemy throughout Asia and the rest of the underdeveloped world.

There are no decisive arguments for keeping China out of the U.N. It is still better to draw China into the world community than to exclude her. But it is only realism to recognize that the arrival of Chou En-lai's man on the Security Council is going to further diminish American influence in the U.N.

China should be afraid of a heavily armed Russia on its northern border, of a potentially rearmed Japan, and of American military action in Laos and Vietnam on its southeastern border. Logically, it should be prepared to pay some political price for friendlier relations with the U.S. which would make it easier to counter the Russian threat and would reduce the other two dangers. But rather than offering concessions, it is demanding them.

China is in a position to make those demands because it sees the U.S. as heavily overcommitted in Asia and seeking a way to cut its commitments. It also sees that Nixon has a losing war on his hands in Vietnam, is under political pressure to extricate himself from the war before November, 1972, and is therefore looking for diplomatic and propaganda victories elsewhere in Asia to distract public attention from a military defeat.

From the standpont of American national interest, it would have been better if Nixon had settled the Vietnam war now and made his approach to Peking after the 1972 election.

Basically, China wants to expel the American military presence from Asia. It could then draw its neighbors into its sphere of influence by the usual techniques of economic aid, political subversion, and military bluff.

In South Korea, we have troops stationed. Our nuclear umbrella shelters Japan. The Seventh Fleet and a military guarantee protect Taiwan. An American army fights in Vietnam. American aid bolsters Thailand and India. Any move Nixon makes in any of these situations sends shock waves through all of the others.

By far the most difficult is Taiwan. China will settle for nothing less than the reannexation of the island. The U.S. could write off Chiang Kai-shek and the mainland Chinese who rule there. But what of our moral obligation to the 12 million native Taiwanese who do not want to pass under communist control and who would like to be free of both Chinese regimes? Will the U.S. permit Taiwan to become the Latvia of Asia?

In reversing his China policy, Nixon has made an act of faith in rationality. He believes that over the long-run, it is better to engage China in a civilized dialogue than to maintain a fixed posture of hostility.

Despite the inevitable stresses and strains, reasonable discourse may make accommodation possible. Everyone hopes that events will justify his act of faith. Surely the effort is worth making. But we court profound disillusionment if we think the way will be easy.

'My Blood Boils To See These People Getting Government Handouts'

Hawaii In December?

City Council action, which experiences the usual summer doldrums, perks up around budget time. One controversial item at present is the $3,000 proposed for the next fiscal year for council members' trips and conferences. The amount represents a 300% increase from the $750 budgeted for the same purpose this fiscal year.

The increase was proposed by council Chairman Dick Hartsock primarily to cover the costs of members to attend the National League of Cities conference which will, as everyone now knows, be held in Hawaii in December. Thus far, a majority of council members are inclined to let the proposed increase stand.

Mrs. Helen Boosalis was the first council member to see the league trip as an excuse to watch the Cornhuskers play football in Honolulu that same weekend and commented: "I'm against taxpayers paying for junkets." Councilman Harry Peterson has received "quite a few statements, not just in jest," from constituents, and says he wants the record to show that he is not going to Hawaii in December for the league's annual conference, nor, we assume, for the football game.

There are other points that should be brought up, however, when judgment becomes colored by football scheduling. One, as Peterson notes, is that the money in the budget can be used for other trips and conferences. Another, as Councilman Merle Hale declares, is that the National League of Cities picked the site for the conference and "they couldn't care less where Nebraska plays football."

In our recent memory, moreover, city officials—mayors, council members or department heads—have at one time or another gone to conferences in Atlanta, New Orleans, San Francisco, Washington and New York, to name only a few pleasure spots, and there was no great hue and cry raised.

The obvious fact is that a great deal can be gained by attending national forums of this sort no matter where they are held. If the council decides, which we hope it does, that Lincoln benefits from its representation in the National League of Cities, then the expenses proposed for the annual conference should be approved. If the council is scared off by a coincidental football game, then the city's membership in the organization is probably not worth anything.

'Economic Justice' Sought

Senate floor spokesmen for the Nixon administration are working against the clock to secure a vote on the Lockheed aid bill so Congress might complete action on the legislation before it recesses on Aug. 6 — a date that must be met, say backers of the nation's largest defense contractor, or Lockheed will go broke.

While the battle to end debate goes on, Sen. George McGovern has proposed an amendment to the bill which would establish a three-man government board with authority to grant $2 billion in loan guarantees to big businesses, including Lockheed, whose collapse could damage the economy of the nation or a region.

In his amendment, Sen. McGovern, who opposes the basic proposal to provide Lockheed and other large corporations with guaranteed loans, would provide an equal amount of federal loan guarantees for small businessmen and small farmers to help "the little man in our economy."

The South Dakota Democrat urged that "in the name of simple economic justice" a similar amount be guaranteed to the "10,000 small businesses across the nation which are in danger of collapsing in this time of inflation-recession." Failure to do this, he said, "may cinch the failure of these companies, for banks will again be encouraged to loan to major corporations, which are protected by the government, rather than to small businesses, which are at the mercy of an unfriendly market-place."

As a means to balance the scales, perhaps the McGovern amendment would be justified —although we don't believe the senator really wants a massive piece of legislation guaranteeing loans to everybody to come to pass. We appreciate, however, his concern that some members of Congress are willing to bail out a large defense contractor or other large corporations with little or no thought to the small businessman or farmer who is not making it.

WALTER CRONKITE

Sharing First Amendment

NEW YORK — The criticism of recent CBS News documentaries, "Selling of the Pentagon" and "Hunger in America," by public officials has been directed at alleged errors in fact or editing. None of the criticism, as far as I have seen, has been directed at the major premise of the two stories — in one case, the expensive and misdirected Pentagon propaganda expenditures, and the other, the fact that untold numbers of Americans are undernourished and many actually are starving.

Our making mistakes is inexcusable, but it is not as serious an offense as that committed by those who would draw red herrings across the trail to hide from the American people the scent of the truth. Another point which some of our critics — most notably the newspapers — either simply cannot see or choose not to see, is this question of the broadcast news under the law.

The eminent Nashville Banner is typical. It proclaims its belief in the First Amendment and the right of free expression — but apparently only for newspapers. For it goes on: "This newspaper would remind, however, that there is a basic difference in this matter of the press . . . and any medium which by the very nature of the case — and the necessity of its periodic licensing — is subject to the will of the FCC, possessed with the power of life or death over it. Reminding Mr. Cronkite, et al, of the constitutional facts of life in no way suggests designs on them on anybody's part. Keeping those facts in focus could, however, take some of the giddiness out of their 'conspiracy caterwauling.'"

Well, that's exactly what the case is all about. For we teeter now on the brink of a communications crisis that could undermine that foundation of our democracy which is a free and responsible press. We all know the economic background of the present situation. We in radio and television, with our greater impact and our numerous outlets, have forced many of our print competitors out of business. It is a rare American city today that has more than one newspaper.

And yet, broadcasting is not an adequate substitute for the newspapers whose demise it has hastened.

If we do our jobs thoroughly, however, we can be a superb monitor on the monopoly newspaper to assure that it does not by plot, caprice or inadvertence miss a major story. We can be, that is, if we are left free to perform that essential journalistic function. The trouble is that we are not free, we are government-licensed.

The power to make us conform is too great to forever lie dormant. The axe lies there temptingly for the use of any enraged administration, Republican, Democrat, Wallacite, New Left.

So we have on one side a monopoly press that may or may not choose to present views other than those of the domineering majority. On the other side, a vigorously competitive but federally regulated broadcast industry.

I can sympathize with the newspapers' attitude toward the broadcast media. They have seen the public swing to a greater acceptance of television news than their print news. They have suffered economically from the advertising competition. Of course, they are unhappy, but I would wish that they could be big enough to support, rather than fight, our right to share the First Amendment guarantees of free expression. I am sorry, too, that some of them have failed to note or have chosen to ignore our acknowledgement of our own limitations in television news, and the essential nature of their print medium.

The Richmond News-Leader, is an example. It said: "If the public insists on approaching network news with the same mesmerized lack of discrimination that it approaches re-runs of 'Gunsmoke,' then Cronkite and company will continue to be regarded as electronic oracles and not as opinionated men with political axes to grind. But if the public refuses to limit its daily intake of news to half-hour, pre-packaged programs, then the power of TV anchormen will fade. If, through other news sources, the public develops the capacity to evaluate properly the golden words of network newscasts, then Walter Cronkite will discover that the public is part of his 'grand conspiracy.'"

Amen. I agree absolutely wholeheartedly with that basic premise.

And let me quote from the same "grand conspiracy" speech: "It disturbs some of us that polls in the United States show that an increasing number are getting most of their news from television—the figure is now well over sixty per cent. This may be inevitable and may not be all bad. We are, as I've said before, reaching people who have been newspaper readers, or at least who have not been thorough newspaper readers, and since newspaper circulations are going up, it can be assumed we are exciting them to seek more information than we can give.

"But that perhaps larger proportion that is limiting its news intake to television is not adequately informed.

"For the long haul it would be well if we worked with our friends of the print media to sponsor courses in high school on how to read a newspaper, how to listen to a radio newscast, how to watch television."

I'm sorry the Richmond paper missed that, in the same speech. Does that really sound as if we believe we are unassailable, beyond criticism?

Letters To The Editor

Brevity in letters is requested but length in itself will have no bearing on publication. Writers are advised that needless details and repetitious matter will be edited out of letters. Too frequent contributions from one person on the same subject may be rejected. All letters must be accompanied by writer's true name but may be submitted for publication under a pen name or initials. However, letters will be printed under a pen name or initials at the editor's discretion.

A Liberal

Lincoln, Neb.

I certainly hope Mr. Rufle (Star, July 21) feels better. Now that he has neatly categorized anyone who cares about others than himself as a guilt-laden, sick "liberal," as he can go on undisturbed with his head buried in the ground, dreaming of an unreal society of Yesterday. Scientific evidence has made it abundantly clear that social problems have social, not individual, origins. Sitting and waiting for "natural" solutions will multiply our problems. Witness our racism problem: The conflict we see is unhealthy for everyone, yet we waited for a hundred years to begin to do anything about it.

Though I eschew labels, Mr. Rufle would surely see fit to label me a liberal. Yes, I perceive that our nation suffers maladies. I also care that we attempt to cope with them to make this country greater. But for the grace of God, any of us, including Mr. Rufle, could be trapped in the shacks of Appalachia, the Harlem ghetto, a reservation of original Americans. We would collectively be better off without these blights; the ideals of America demand that we try to eliminate them. If that course be pathological, then I'm in the wrong country.

Good Music

Lincoln, Neb.

It is indeed high time to stop the cacophonies and in music, return to everlasting, immortal, classic works, as suggested in a letter of July 20. Let's leave the "noise" music to the peoples of the jungle. A cultivated society such as Nebraskans is entitled to something better.

The names of the composers and the pieces presented should be pronounced correctly or not at all. It is a mockery, for example, instead of Chopin to say something more like "Chaplin," or use English pronouncement for French names.

Nowadays much is said about the "media." Often the media men blame others but forget about their own errors.

Outdoor Services

Lincoln, Neb.

We are so sorry that Dr. Bruce Cowgill, of the Nebraska Game Commission, feels he must prohibit religious services in our state parks. These services have been especially beautiful and meaningful to our family and many more families like ours.

Whether it has been in the beauty of Bryce Canyon, Pioneers Park or Ponca State Park, one at least feels close to our Creator as He worships with others in the beauty of God's world.

We especially love these informal gatherings because we all can go just as we are. Nobody is forced to attend any of these services.

In early June, while we were in a cabin at Ponca State Park, we were so pleased that the young boys brought us a little notice telling us of the services.

We would not have to drive into town on Sunday morning to attend church. That is regular routing that we do each Sunday in our home town.

It would be so wonderful if these informal worship services could be continued in our state parks.

Vote Of Confidence

Lincoln, Neb.

I read with great interest your editorial, "In Perspective," which appeared in the Tuesday, July 20 Star. I agree wholeheartedly with your assessment of Senator Stromer's comments.

The League has remained nonpartisan out of concern for the goals of our organization. We do not believe that direct involvement with either political party will serve our purpose.

We still face the long process of establishing statewide credibility. I am certain that your editorial will speed us toward that goal. Thank you for your vote of confidence.

Military Equipment Stolen For Narcotics

WASHINGTON — The Army's drug rehabilitation program at Ft. Bragg, N.C., is in such a shambles that drugs are sold right on the base and $500,000 worth of military equipment was stolen and pawned last year to buy narcotics.

These are the distressing findings of a confidential draft report to the House Commerce Committee by Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., who has just completed an on-the-spot investigation.

Murphy said the program, known as "Operation Awareness," is hopelessly underfunded, undermanned and unsuccessful.

Despite President Nixon's avowed commitment to solve the drug problem, Murphy discovered that there was so little money available to help the GIs at Fort Bragg that the education materials used in the program practically had to be stolen from other facilities.

"In desperation," the congressman says, "the managers of 'Operation Awareness' finally asked the Nixon administration for a minimum of $100,000 to operate the program. They got $31,000."

"Another major method . . . is the practice of many GIs who go to Atlanta, Ga., to purchase 'three spoons' of high-grade heroin which they cut with dilutants. They shoot up half of the drug themselves and sell the other half to addicts on the base.

"The critical increase in the Bragg area drug traffic was pointed out to me by military police who told me that in 1968, in one six-block area of (nearby) Fayetteville, the military narcotic squad purchased three bindles (small containers) of heroin.

"In 1971, in the same area, they were offered a total of 10 pounds of the drug by pushers . . . Enforcement officials . . . frankly admitted it was beyond their control."

☆ ☆ ☆

Murphy found that 80 per cent of the drug patients at Ft. Bragg were enlistees, not draftees. "Their medical records indicate that the reasons for volunteering in the Army ranged from a desire to get away from a bad home situation to making a choice between a prison sentence or going into the service."

One captain told Murphy that "the enlisted men turn on (give pot to) the officers."

The congressman heard harrowing tales of drug use in Vietnam from soldiers who had returned from the war. "One trooper (nicknamed Lee Oswald) claimed he was 'smashed on heroin for 365 days.' He said he did not seek to engage the enemy, on the contrary he avoided contact.

"Two Puerto Rican addicts talked freely of 'fragging' (throwing a hand grenade at) officers who cracked down . . . on them over drug use. A trooper named 'Speedy' Gonzalez told me that he and his buddy fragged two captains in a grass hut."

Murphy concludes that instead of the ineffective military program at Ft. Bragg and other places, drug users in the military should be discharged for physical disability and "turned over to the existing federal programs for treatment and rehabilitation."

Wilson's Reversal On Pro-European Position Netting Him Ridicule And Possible Downfall

LONDON — The question dominating political talk in Britain is whether Harold Wilson, after all his years of careful balancing, is headed now for a great fall. His performance lately has begun to raise doubts about whether he can keep a grip on himself and on the leadership of the Labor party.

Even those who have no personal liking for Wilson are discussing his situation with some sympathy. As this country's leading political commentator, David Watt of the Financial Times, put it, he presents "a tragic spectacle."

Hardly any politician in memory has been so humiliatingly treated in the public prints. In the last few days commentators across the political spectrum have referred to him as a weasel and a man incapable of blushing, accused him bluntly of "prevarication" and called his speeches "demeaning" and "snivelling."

Another reason for sympathy is that he is under severe pressure. The Labor party is hopelessly split on the issue of Britain's joining the European Economic Community. Most of the men on whom Wilson relied as prime minister are pro-European—notably Roy Jenkins, his deputy leader. The party's left and the big trade unions are violently opposed.

☆ ☆ ☆

But Wilson has brought the trouble on himself. Over the last six months, and with a terrible acceleration in recent days, he has acted on the European issue as if determined to destroy himself.

County Commissioners Slice At Budget To Beat Mill Limit

Lancaster County commissioners Tuesday chipped away at their record budget for the 1971-72 fiscal year to bring the total under the 14.28 mill levy limit.

Commissioners went through budget requests of county departments and made numerous tentative cuts after learning from County Clerk Carl Hartman that he has roughly figured the mill levy before any cuts at 14.56.

If the mill levy figure is reasonably correct, budget expenditures would exceed the amount allowable and must be cut to bring the levy under 14.28 mills.

Between 13, 14 Mills

Commissioner Kenneth Bourne said afterwards he guesses the county mill levy would probably range between 13 and 14 mills. The levy for the 1970-71 fiscal year was 10.72.

County board members hoped to finish up budget discussions Wednesday afternoon as the budget must be in the hands of the county clerk by Aug. 1. No date has yet been set for a public hearing.

Budget cuts Tuesday totalled a net $89,500, which includes additions to the budget, with some salaries for departments also in question.

"We are trimming everything we can — we got to," remarked Commissionr Bill Grossman to District Court Clerk Otis Nelson in regard to a proposal to create another chief deputy position.

The board took no final action on that proposal, which Nelson said would amount to an extra $900 for the year and no extra employes.

Welfare Cut Most

The biggest slice came in the welfare department budget — $70,000. Commissioners cut $50,000 out of the medical fund (from $850,000 to $800,000) and reduced administrative expenses by $5,000. Also reduced were appropriations for were appropriations for alcoholic rehabilitation by $10,000 (from $15,000 to $5,000).

Rex Earle, manager of Lancaster Manor, told board members his salary projections are based on a 123-bed count — the amount Lancaster Manor is licensed to handle at the present time — with the number of persons there now at 109.

Earle said expenses listed were kept at a bare minimum. Commissioners after discussing the budget of $715,000 cut only $1,000 for mileage.

In several cases, commissioners reduced the amounts of cuts earlier authorized.

The commissioners even made a cut in their own budget decreasing mileage and travel by $500 from $2,000 to $1,500.

Board Paroles 24 Inmates

By The Associated Press

The State Parole Board Tuesday granted parole to a pair of inmates from the Women's Reformatory at York, 14 inmates from the Men's Reformatory, and eight inmates from the Penal Complex.

Four cases were deferred for later consideration and the only parole application denied was that of Norman Bianas, 34, of South Dakota. He was sentenced in 1970 to serve one to two years after his conviction in Sheridan County District Court on a charge of uttering a forged instrument.

GEORGE HARRISON

Harrison Will Head Benefit For Refugees

New York (UPI) — Former Beatle George Harrison said Tuesday he is nervous about working solo at a benefit concert Sunday but is willing to try it in hopes of making upwards of $2 to $3 million for East Pakistani refugees.

The concert at which Harrison and other headliners — probably including Ringo Starr and possibly John Lennon — are to appear in Madison Square Garden will be Harrison's first in four years and the first in which he ever worked as a single.

"I would really prefer to be part of a band," he said.

Harrison estimated that the gate at the concert will amount to about $250,000, and that an album to be released "six to 10 days" later and a film version of the performance will make "$2 or $3 million more."

The entire proceeds from afternoon and evening performances of the benefit will go to help the refugees, he said.

Allen Klein of Apple records, who was the Beatles' manager until the quartet broke up, said the recording company will assume all costs of producing the concert, which he estimated at "about $75,000, but what difference does it make? Whatever it is, it is."

Harrison, Klein and Indian musician Ravi Shankar spoke to newsmen Tuesday in a crowded news conference in Klein's midtown office.

The benefit was organized by Shankar, a sitar player and recording artist whom Harrison has known for more than five years.

"We wanted to do as much as possible in the way of helping the displaced people, and in particular the children," Shankar said. The idea of a benefit concert was "spontaneous," he said and he approached Harrison, who was in California with Shankar making a film.

Man Bound Over On Motor Vehicle Homicide Charge

Willie Savage, 21, of 605 No. 26th, was bound over to Lancaster District Court after preliminary hearing on a felony charge of motor vehicle homicide.

Savage is charged in connection with an accident June 12 in which Stephen I. Morgan, 19, of Lincoln, was killed.

Savage was bound over to District Court after he entered no plea in County Court. Bond was set at $1,500.

Waverly Officials Appear To Back New Road

Waverly officials appeared before the Lancaster County Board Tuesday in support of road extension near Waverly.

The road involved would lead to a newly constructed grain elevator on the east side of town.

Those appearing said truck traffic goes through the village to the elevator.

Some Carry Ammonia

The road extension, they said, would eliminate congestion and increase safety in the village. They added that some of the trucks carry anhydrous ammonia.

The proposed road extension would cover one half mile over three properties.

City Enginner Walter Hoppe said that a mile of road could be opened to best take care of the area. The second half mile, though, would include a bridge over Ash Hollow Creek, Hoppe said.

County board members instructed Hoppe to check with the property owners in regard to acquisition of the land for a half mile extension.

County Clerk Carl Hartman reported to the board what he thought might be an illegal incident involving a county employe regarding an insurance payment and called for an investigation.

Had Insurance

Hartman, who declined to give names, said the female employe had insurance through a county-subsidized policy which would have covered an operaton she had.

He said that the employe took a leave of absence and received a hysterectomy through the county welfare department instead.

Hartman said the only reasoning he could imagine for not using the county policy might be the employe's getting more from the welfare department. He also questioned whether there might have been collusion between the welfare department and the department where the girl works.

In other business, the county commissioners agreed to mark all county vehicles with a stencil after turning down a proposal by Commissioner Robert Colin to identify the vehicles with a stencil.

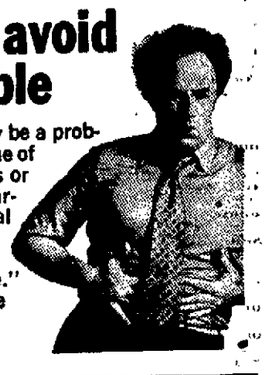

Street Closings Are Announced

Closed until Aug. 24 for paving repair work is 45th between Y and Vine, the city traffic engineers office announced.

The intersection of Lewis and Elba is also closed until Aug. 10 for paving repair.

GEORGE HARRISON

Harrison Will Head Benefit For Refugees

New York (UPI) — Former Beatle George Harrison said Tuesday he is nervous about working solo at a benefit concert Sunday but is willing to try it in hopes of making upwards of $2 to $3 million for East Pakistani refugees.

The concert at which Harrison and other headliners — probably including Ringo Starr and possibly John Lennon — are to appear in Madison Square Garden will be Harrison's first in four years and the first in which he ever worked as a single.

"I would really prefer to be part of a band," he said.

Harrison estimated that the gate at the concert will amount to about $250,000, and that an album to be released "six to 10 days" later and a film version of the performance will make "$2 or $3 million more."

The entire proceeds from afternoon and evening performances of the benefit will go to help the refugees, he said.

Allen Klein of Apple records, who was the Beatles' manager until the quartet broke up, said the recording company will assume all costs of producing the concert, which he estimated at "about $75,000, but what difference does it make? Whatever it is, it is."

Harrison, Klein and Indian musician Ravi Shankar spoke to newsmen Tuesday in a crowded news conference in Klein's midtown office.

The benefit was organized by Shankar, a sitar player and recording artist whom Harrison has known for more than five years.

"We wanted to do as much as possible in the way of helping the displaced people, and in particular the children," Shankar said. The idea of a benefit concert was "spontaneous," he said and he approached Harrison, who was in California with Shankar making a film.

Man Bound Over On Motor Vehicle Homicide Charge

Willie Savage, 21, of 605 No. 26th, was bound over to Lancaster District Court after preliminary hearing on a felony charge of motor vehicle homicide.

Savage is charged in connection with an accident June 12 in which Stephen I. Morgan, 19, of Lincoln, was killed.

Savage was bound over to District Court after he entered no plea in County Court. Bond was set at $1,500.

Waverly Officials Appear To Back New Road

Waverly officials appeared before the Lancaster County Board Tuesday in support of road extension near Waverly.

The road involved would lead to a newly constructed grain elevator on the east side of town.

Those appearing said truck traffic goes through the village to the elevator.

Some Carry Ammonia

The road extension, they said, would eliminate congestion and increase safety in the village. They added that some of the trucks carry anhydrous ammonia.

The proposed road extension would cover one half mile over three properties.

City Enginner Walter Hoppe said that a mile of road could be opened to best take care of the area. The second half mile, though, would include a bridge over Ash Hollow Creek, Hoppe said.

County board members instructed Hoppe to check with the property owners in regard to acquisition of the land for a half mile extension.

County Clerk Carl Hartman reported to the board what he thought might be an illegal incident involving a county employe regarding an insurance payment and called for an investigation.

Had Insurance

Hartman, who declined to give names, said the female employe had insurance through a county-subsidized policy which would have covered an operaton she had.

He said that the employe took a leave of absence and received a hysterectomy through the county welfare department instead.

Hartman said the only reasoning he could imagine for not using the county policy might be the employe's getting more from the welfare department. He also questioned whether there might have been collusion between the welfare department and the department where the girl works.

In other business, the county commissioners agreed to mark all county vehicles with a stencil after turning down a proposal by Commissioner Robert Colin to identify the vehicles with a stencil.

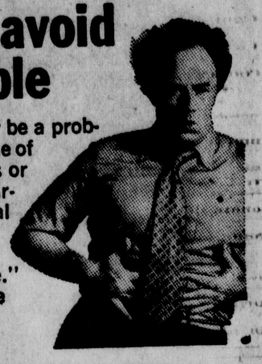

Street Closings Are Announced

Closed until Aug. 24 for paving repair work is 45th between Y and Vine, the city traffic engineers office announced.

The intersection of Lewis and Elba is also closed until Aug. 10 for paving repair.

Quality Of Water In Some Streams Said 'Close To Crisis Conditions'

The quality of water in some Nebraska streams may be "close to crisis conditions," a California consultant told the legislative water study committee Tuesday.

"You may be close to crisis conditions in certain streams unless you take some actions in an environmental direction," Harvey Banks, a consulting engineer from Belmonte, Calif., said.

Nebraska must be "careful" in the use of Sandhills groundwater, Banks cautioned, or it could produce "an adverse impact" downstream.

"You have some rather serious quality problems," Banks said.

"It is almost a crisis. The longer you let it go along, the worse it gets and the longer it takes to solve it."

Banks offered his observations in response to questioning from Sen. Wayne Ziebarth of Wilcox.

"Historicaliy, the State of Nebraska does nothing until there is a crisis," Ziebarth told Banks.

The study committee, chaired by Sen. Maurice Kremer of Aurora, is considering ways to implement a comprehensive statewide water plan.

Banks served as a consultant to the State Soil and Water Conservation Commission in preparing a framework study paving the way for development of a water plan.

James Owen, the commission's chief planner, presented the study committee with a list of recommended action to implement the framework survey.

Included in his recommendations are continued funding of the new state aid program for municipal waste treatment facilities, accelerated funding for the flood plain regulation program and financing for an investigation of surface water and ground water relationships in the Loup and Middle Platte Basins.

The latter is based on a proposal requested by the committee from Chancellor D. B. Varner of the University of Nebraska, Owen said.

Owen also recommended a pilot program in flood warning.

Other recommendations included a $35,000 allotment for Platte River Basin studies and enactment of a water and land resource development act which would either move all planning to a single agency or provide a strong means of coordination.

Airport Authority Slates Meeting For 3 National Car Rental Firms

The Airport Authority will meet in special session Wednesday at 9:30 a.m. on the subject of rental car operations at the airport terminal.

The Airport Authority last week adopted a motion which would have cleared the way for Nova Leasing Co., a local car rental firm, to become a fourth rental car agency at the airport.

The motion, introduced by Richard Chapin, would drop the provision that an agency either have 100 outlets located elsewhere in the nation at airports or else be linked with a firm that does.

Apparently, the local firm could not meet that requirement.

Airport Authority Chairman Richard Joyce said Tuesday that the other three national rental car agencies now at the terminal feel they have not been fairly treated and want a chance to be heard in regard to the entire situation. They contend they were not given a chance to be heard.

The rental car operators were not present at the meeting last week at which time Norman Krivosha, attorney for Nova Leasing, appeared in objection to the 100-outlet provision.

Krivosha remarked his client could not meet that requirement and that the requirement is unfair and constitutes a restraint of trade.

Meanwhile, at the time the motion was adopted, the national rental car firms reportedly had not sent in their signed leases.

Joyce had voted along with Joe Hampton in opposition to the motion. Hampton said he felt a national firm could conceivably pull out because of the possibility of less profits.

Exon May Receive Assist In Anti-Pornography Battle

Gov. J. J. Exon says he believes "a local area has a right to set its own community standards" for the determination of what reading material, films or other entertainment should be allowed.

Exon, in a speech last week in Kansas City, Mo., promised a drive in Nebraska against pornography and he describes that speech as "just a kickoff" to the effort he intends to expend on the subject.

Exon said that what might be tolerated in some states or communities might be found unacceptable in another locale.

He says local governments should be making value judgments on acceptability and believes they have such power through enforcement of laws "presently on the books."

Exon may receive aid in his campaign from Citizens for Decent Literature (CDL).

John Sullivan, an Exon aide, said CDL National Director Ray Gauer is expected to contact Exon's office Friday.

Sullivan says a seminar may be set up for county attorneys and law enforcement agencies although he and Exon stressed nothing definite has yet been determined.

According to Sullivan, Atty. Gen. Clarence A. H. Meyer is "concerned" about the area of hard-core pornography but has not yet made a commitment relative to the proposed seminar.

Tentative Trial Dates Set For Teacher Suing District

Tentative trial dates have been set for mid-August in the case of a Lincoln schoolteacher who is suing the Lincoln School District in an attempt to keep his job.

Robert Grimit, attorney for Robert L. Johnson, said Aug. 12 and 13 had been designated as the trial dates.

Johnson, a tenured junior high teacher with 20 years experience in Lincoln schools, was not rehired for the coming year after district administrators said they had judged him incompetent.

The Lincoln Board of Education upheld the recommendation to terminate his contract after a public hearing late last spring. Johnson has filed suit in U.S. District Court to try to reverse the board's action.

Grimit said Tuesday that although Judge Richard Robinson of Omaha had made the arrangements for the trial, no definite word had been given on who would hear the case or whether it would be heard in Lincoln or Omaha.

It was understood that Judge Robert Van Pelt of Lincoln, who had been handling the case, may not be available because of an illness in his family.

A warm blue morning at Miranda Hill, looking down through blazing red flamboyant trees to Jamaica waters. Columbus sailed along here.

Miranda Hill is a hotel. A most elegant hotel. Cottages for two are $90 a day in season. (December 15-April 15.) In the warm summer, they cut it in half.

Not because it's so warm here — the weather's a pleasant 80. A cool trade wind sweeps the hills. We are barefoot in Stayprest shorts. (Wonderful, rich Blue Mountain coffee on the table.)

Barefoot and travel checks only half expended.

Barefoot and an eye on the bluebird.

☆ ☆ ☆

Winter is when the frozen Easterns come to thaw out. The rich birds fly south, and Jamaica makes money.

Miranda Hill is on the hills above Montego Bay, a shacky, sandy, black banana town on the cool north shore.

Miranda Hill has a rich background. (Let's hear it for the International Set!)

It was built as a private home by Captain Edward Molyneux, Who? Your mother wore Paris clothing designed by Molyneux, that's wheux.

Lord Beaverbook came over and laid the cornerstone.

Winston Churchill was the first guest.

It's a long white tropical building. Vine-covered porticoes and arbors. Twenty-foot ceilings. Paneled walls. French antique furniture — the kind the Kings Louis used to sit on.

It was bought by Tom Noonan (a young Hilton and Holiday Inn exec). Cottages have been put around the main house where Captain Molyneux lived the gay life. He once imported an entire Broadway musical for a part for five hundred guests.

☆ ☆ ☆

The Captain was a swinger. "Captain" comes from World War I. He was a British ace of the RAF. Lost an eye in a dramatic sky high shootout over France.

After the war, he went to Paris. Became one of the GREAT dress designers. Made a mint. Built the house at Miranda Hill where he entertained all the mighty names. He designed the place himself.

The long low tropical house is white with canary shutters. Built for gracious living in the colonial style. (Music to whip slaves by.)

Noonan said: "Molyneux had everything in white-and-yellow. Even the garden. See the Jerusalem pine with yellow flowers? If a hibiscus came out in any other color than yellow, he had it RIPPED out!"

Lord Beaverbrook carved his name on the cornerstone: "February 5, 1953."

The shaded walkways are tiled. Lush tropical creepers put thick tendrils on shade trees. There are almonds spilling on the ground. Little yellow limes and oranges and broad leaf banana plants.

☆ ☆ ☆

Like most of these stiff British islands (even though 90 per cent African black) you must put on shoes and tie and jacket for dinner. Black tie is not discouraged.

The elegance that Captain Molyneux imported privately is carried on.

Molyneux is now 85. Living at Monte Carlo, that landing field for lame ducks of the international brigade.

He has designed a NEW house and is building it in Paris.

He came back here last year. A sentimental journey. Noonan found him in the bar with his constant male companion.

He was drinking the dryest and best champagne. Stirring the bubbles out with his own silver swizzle stick. A man for all seasons.

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

A warm blue morning at Miranda Hill, looking down through blazing red flamboyant trees to Jamaica waters. Columbus sailed along here.

Miranda Hill is a hotel. A most elegant hotel. Cottages for two are $90 a day in season. (December 15-April 15.) In the warm summer, they cut it in half.

Not because it's so warm here — the weather's a pleasant 80. A cool trade wind sweeps the hills. We are barefoot in Stayprest shorts. (Wonderful, rich Blue Mountain coffee on the table.)

Barefoot and travel checks only half expended.

Barefoot and an eye on the bluebird.

☆ ☆ ☆

Winter is when the frozen Easterns come to thaw out. The rich birds fly south, and Jamaica makes money.

Miranda Hill is on the hills above Montego Bay, a shacky, sandy, black banana town on the cool north shore.

Miranda Hill has a rich background. (Let's hear it for the International Set!)

It was built as a private home by Captain Edward Molyneux, Who? Your mother wore Paris clothing designed by Molyneux, that's wheux.

Lord Beaverbook came over and laid the cornerstone.

Winston Churchill was the first guest.

It's a long white tropical building. Vine-covered porticoes and arbors. Twenty-foot ceilings. Paneled walls. French antique furniture — the kind the Kings Louis used to sit on.

It was bought by Tom Noonan (a young Hilton and Holiday Inn exec). Cottages have been put around the main house where Captain Molyneux lived the gay life. He once imported an entire Broadway musical for a part for five hundred guests.

☆ ☆ ☆

The Captain was a swinger. "Captain" comes from World War I. He was a British ace of the RAF. Lost an eye in a dramatic sky high shootout over France.

After the war, he went to Paris. Became one of the GREAT dress designers. Made a mint. Built the house at Miranda Hill where he entertained all the mighty names. He designed the place himself.

The long low tropical house is white with canary shutters. Built for gracious living in the colonial style. (Music to whip slaves by.)

Noonan said: "Molyneux had everything in white-and-yellow. Even the garden. See the Jerusalem pine with yellow flowers? If a hibiscus came out in any other color than yellow, he had it RIPPED out!"

Lord Beaverbrook carved his name on the cornerstone: "February 5, 1953."

The shaded walkways are tiled. Lush tropical creepers put thick tendrils on shade trees. There are almonds spilling on the ground. Little yellow limes and oranges and broad leaf banana plants.

☆ ☆ ☆

Like most of these stiff British islands (even though 90 per cent African black) you must put on shoes and tie and jacket for dinner. Black tie is not discouraged.

The elegance that Captain Molyneux imported privately is carried on.

Molyneux is now 85. Living at Monte Carlo, that landing field for lame ducks of the international brigade.

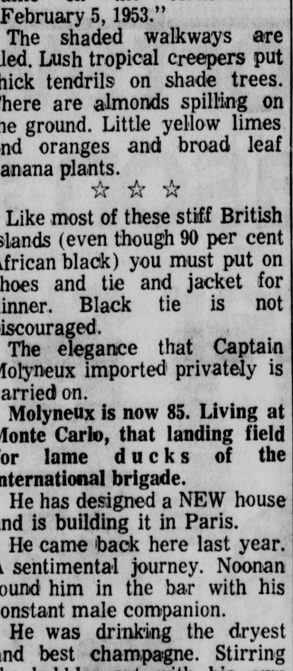

He has designed a NEW house and is building it in Paris.

He came back here last year. A sentimental journey. Noonan found him in the bar with his constant male companion.

He was drinking the dryest and best champagne. Stirring the bubbles out with his own silver swizzle stick. A man for all seasons.

Pollution Control Agency Lets Lincolnites Breathe Easier

By LINDA SULLIVAN
Star Staff Writer

Lincolnites who've been worrying about pollution in the area should breathe easier knowing that the Lincoln-Lancaster County Air Pollution Control Agency is around. Judging from its annual report, the agency is working.

"Using the National Air Surveillance Network data for 1960 and 1970, there has been a 45% reduction in suspended particulates . . . and there is roughly 9,000 tons less identifiable pollutants emitted into the Lincoln air each year," Executive Secretary L. A. Sanger told the agency Tuesday.

Sanger said that in 1960, stations at Havelock, Hawthorne and Belmont Schools and the County City Building, showed an average of 112 micrograms of pollutants per cubic meter of air. The reading now is somewhere around 62 micrograms per cubic meter.

Open Burning Controlled

Sanger attributed much of the success of the agency's anti-pollution fight to community control of open burning of refuse, and commercial and industrial efforts to curb pollution caused by their firms.

Sanger said that 45,000 Lincolnites have stopped backyard trash burning since the agency was created four years ago, illustrating the great support the community has given anti-pollution efforts.

A report on industrial anti-pollution efforts in Lancaster County stated that the agency's "experience with industry over the past four years has been gratifying."

Many Firms Cited

The report cited anti-pollution efforts by many Lincoln firms, including Cather Brothers Construction, Abel Construction, Burlington Northern Havelock Shops, Archer-Daniel-Midland Co., Gooch's Mill and several grain elevators located in and around Lincoln.

"It is hoped that we will see some improvement in the air quality of Havelock. The industries mentioned have not been the only source of air pollution to the northeast section of Lincoln. Non-industrial sources such as dust from gravel streets, smoke and soot from the burning at the city sanitary landfill, plus other smaller sources contribute to the pollutants to the air," the report continued.

The average ambient air quality reading for the Havelock area in 1970 was 81 micrograms per cubic meter. Hawthorne School showed 69, Belmont 64 and the County City Building 82.

Sanger said the agency's efforts had met with "unusual successes," but warned against overconfidence on the part of the agency and community.

'No Time for Complacency'

"Although these measurements of air quality may be a source of comfort to all of us, this is no time for complacency. These are not necessarily precise nor complete measurements of air quality for the region."

Sanger went on to say it is useless to compare Lincoln's air quality to Las Vegas, Omaha's or some other city's.

"Prudence suggests that a more meaningful game of competition should be based on each community's action to secure air quality," he said, explaining that many cities do not begin their anti-pollution fight with the same advantages Lincoln has.

In other action at the Tuesday meeting, board members elected Glenn E. Bonacker president and Leo Hill, vice president.

Air Force Chief Of Staff's Daughter Is Bound Over On Drug Charges

The daughter of U.S. Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. John D. Ryun and her husband were bound over to Lancaster District Court Tuesday on felony drug charges.

Mrs. Patricia Jo Cornell and her husband, Carlyle P. Cornell III, both 23, were ordered to stand trial by County Judge Ralph W. Slocum following a two hour preliminary hearing.

The couple was also fined $50 each on misdemeanor charges of illegal possession of marijuana.

Arrested June 2

The Cornells were arrested June 2 at a farmhouse near Princeton, just south of Lincoln, in a raid by state and county law enforcement officers.

They were originally charged with possession of marijuana and phencyclidine, an animal tranquilizer commonly called PCP. Possession of PCP is a felony.

The Cornell's attorney, Patrick Healey of Lincoln, had sought dismissal of both charges on grounds that the 1971 law under which they were charged failed to legally define "possession."

Although a similar challenge of the law, sponsored by State Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh, is pending before the State Supreme Court, Slocum overruled Healey's contention.

Occupied By Others

Healey also contended the state failed to prove the Cornells actually possessed the drugs since the house in which they were living also had been occupied by several other persons.

"The evidence is that several persons occupied the house," Healey argued, "and it's pure speculation that the defendants were in possession of the marijuana."

State Patrol Lt. Wayne Row estified that hashish pipes and similar paraphernalia and various amounts of marijuana were found in several rooms of the house, including the bedroom occupied by the Cornells.

PCP With Medicine

The PCP pills were discovered among bottles containing prescription drugs at the house, the drug enforcement office testified.

Bonds for the felony charge of possessing PCP were reduced from $1,500 to $1,000 each for the Cornells. The judge also set appeal bonds of the misdemeanor charges of marijuana possession at $100 each

Mrs. Cornell is a former student at the University of Nebraska, and her husband was a student at the Dental College at the time of their arrest. He has since been suspended from school.

Circle K Brothers Crossing Nebraska On 96-Day Jaunt

Kearney (AP) — Tony and Joel Ahlstrom, brothers who are members of the Circle K Club of Trinity College in Deerfield, Ill., passed through Kearney County Tuesday on a 96-day, 2,900-mile cross country run from Long Beach, Calif., to Long Beach, N.Y.

The brothers are promoting the 16th annual convention of Circle K International, a college Kiwanis organization, and highlighting the urgency of the envirionmental crisis.

The brother harriers, keeping a steady eight-mile-per hour pace, attempt to average 23 to 32 miles in a four-hour stint each day and then rest.

They spent Monday night in Holdrege, calling it the midway mark in a run that started on Memorial Day. Holdrege was the 50th day.

The runner, followed by three companions in a van traveled along Highway 6-34, with Heartwell as their Tuesday night stop.

In Lincoln Saturday

Juniata and Hastings were on the Wednesday itinerary, Sutton Grafton and Fairmont on the Thursday itinerary; Exeter, Friend and Milford on Friday's schedule with Pleasant Dale, Emerald, Lincoln and Waverly on Saturday.

Sunday is a day off and Monday's run takes them through Ashland and Greenwood. Aug. 3 they hit Papillion, Ralston and Council Bluffs.

By way of a warmup the pair ran from Chicago to Detroit on Thanksgiving weekend, a distance 270 miles.

3-Day Alumni Gathering Set At Boys Town

Boys Town (AP) — The three-day national convention of Boys Town alumni is expected to gather in Omaha and Boys Town. Friday through Sunday, alumni from all over the world.

Business meetings will be held at Boys Town and social events will be at the Omaha Holiday Inn. Omaha Mayor Eugene Leahy will be the guest speaker at an evening banquet and dance at the Holiday Inn Saturday.

Budget For Pius X Set At $322,000

The Lincoln Catholic Board of Education has okayed a 1971-72 budget of nearly $322,000 for Pius X High School.

Board President Roy Loudon said the budget is down some $5,000 from this year's.

Income will include about $107,000 from tuition and the remainder from parishes served by the four-year school, Loudon said.

Claims Are Denied For Windshields Allegedly Broken In Disturbances

Omaha (AP) —The city of Omaha has denied all 22 claims for windshields allegedly broken during disturbances earlier this month in the Memorial Park area.

Assistant City Atty. James E. Fellows said the claims were denied because the windshields were broken by the police and officers not acting as agents of the city and therefore the city is not liable.

However, he said if a policeman did break a windshield outside the line of duty he would be liable personally for the damages.

The 22 claims for broken auto glass totaled about $3,000.

The attorney said there were instances in which officers may have been justified in breaking windshields, such as while he is in the process of making an arrest, in order to affect the arrest, or to move a car deliverately blocking traffic.

Fellows said he didn't know how citizens might file personal claims against patrolmen who allegedly broke out windows if the patrolmen were not wearing their name tags.

Elections Planned

Port Moresby, New Guinea (AP) — New Guinea will hold a general election early in 1972 in an attempt to create a Parliament to which Australia would hand over extensive powers of self-government, officials said. New Guinea, with 2.3 million people, is the world's last large trust territory.

J. E. Shurigar, Contractor, Dies

Kenesaw — Funeral services for J. Edwin Shurigar, 40, farmer and contractor here, will be at 11 a.m. Wednesday at the Kenesaw Presbyterian Church. He died Sunday.

He was a partner in Shurigar Brothers, Inc., a land-leveling heavy construction firm.

Surviving are his wife, Betty; daughters, Mrs. Gary Wiles of Kearney, Janice of Kearney, and Barbara, Patricia and Mollye B., all at home; five brothers and one sister.

Record $28.6 Million Budget Approved By School Board

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

A record $28.6 million budget for 1971-72 won unanimous approval from the Lincoln Board of Education Tuesday.

Recommendations that resulted from several weeks of work by staff members and the board were approved without modification at the board's regular meeting.

The total budget, up from the $27 million budget for the current fiscal year, will be supported by an increase of about $770,000 in local property taxes and anticipated hikes in a number of other revenue sources.

Slight Rise

The district's mill levy, based on an assessed valuation of $390 million, will inch up .4 of a mill, from 54.552 to 54.952.

Major program expansion is limited to the Lincoln Technical College, whose local tax support will jump from the current $400,137 to $731,060.

In discussion prior to passage of the budget, board members decided to leave unchanged staff recommendations for staffing at Meadow Lane School and for salaries for teacher aides.

Both topics were discussed Monday night at the public hearing.

'Pretty Good'

Supt. John Prasch told the board class size at Meadow Lane "will be pretty good" this fall, except in fifth grade classes.

In response to requests Monday night for pay increases for teacher aides, who were granted no hikes for the coming year, Prasch said his cabinet decided after long discussion not to recommend increases for that group.

He said he hoped the aides might be put on salary plans which differ from teacher salary schedules based on years' experience.

Need To Organize

The superintendent also repeated his recommendation to spokesmen for the aides to form an organization with representatives for salary negotiations.

Board member Ed Copple responded to that with a statement that "as a good business enterprise, we shouldn't force them to organize."

But Prasch said the aides are now "fragmented" and "do need someone" to speak for them

'Be Careful'

Board member Robert Wekesser suggested the pool of people willing to work part-time as aides "is the market we want to tap," but Prasch said the district 'has got to be careful about exploiting people who happen to be here."

Approval of the coming year budgets actually came on two votes — one on the regular program and another on the Lincoln Technical College.

Total for the day school program, including building fund levy and other funds, will be $27.1 million. The tech college budget will total about $1.5 million, compared with $970,000 last year.

Lincoln Schools Plan English Study Changes

Changes designed to improve students' mastery of skills will be instituted this fall in the English curriculum of the Lincoln Public Schools, the Board of Education was told Tuesday.

Associate Supt. Ronald Brandt, who heads the district's instruction division, said the changes will be aimed at modifying the Nebraska English Curriculum developed at the University of Nebraska

Emphasis this year will be in grades three, four and seven, Brandt said, adding that curriculum committees will be at work during the year on recommended changes in grades five, six and eight.

Change Anticipated

A system-wide change in the latter three grades is anticipated in 1972-73, he said

In a written explanation of the changes for the coming year, prepared by Brandt and English consultant Dorothy Olson, the new directions were explained as an attempt to supplement current programs with additional emphasis on spelling, punctuation, handwriting, literature and language study.

Seminars throughout the year will help teachers identify and study particular problem areas

New materials in use will include a new textbook for the younger grades and a "skills box" for seventh-grade students.

Acting as the board for the Lincoln Technical College, the school board approved an agreement with the University of Nebraska to provide college-level programs in industrial and technical education.

Under the five-year agreement, the university will pay the tech college $14 per credit hour for students it agrees to accept.

The students will enroll through NU and will receive university credit for the courses.

Appointments OKd

In personnel action, the board okayed several appointments, including naming Carl Spencer as supervisor of a federally funded reading program and John Dudley as coordinator of a new program for gifted students.

Mrs. Beverly Ashley was moved from assistant principal at Holmes School to acting principal at Riley, and Richard Spearman, assistant principal at Bethany, was named principal of that school.

In other matters, the board:

—was told Prasch would bring a recommendation to the board for a modest expansion in busing for the coming year.
—discussed a policy on use of volunteers in the schools
—was told Prash will probably recommend selling several buildings now in use as annexes for Belmont School
—okayed on-site studies for possible acquisition of federal surplus equipment for use in a new tech college program —held an executive session to discuss legal matters

Senate Committee Is Hostile To Nixon's Family Assistance Plan

Washington (UPI) — The Senate Finance Committee opened hearings Tuesday on President Nixon's welfare reform plan, but conservative and liberal members alike gave it a hostile reception despite an administration appeal for speedy action.

The committee, which refused to pass a similar bill last year after it had cleared the house, heard Secretary Elliot L. Richardson of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) testify that the legislation "is the nation's No. 1 domestic priority and it is urgent that it be enacted without delay."

But committee chairman Russell Long, D-La., made clear quickly that he was not ready to accept the bill, which would guarantee a minimum $2,400 annual income for every family of four.

The estimated $5 5 billion extra yearly cost of the so-called family assistance plan "has never been a problem," Long told Richardson. "Will it work is the question. It's just pouring more billions into something that won't work."

Long and fellow conservatives on the committee argued that the current bill, which the House passed June 23 by a wide 288-132 margin, would put too many of the wrong kind of people on relief

As it stands now, the bill contains provisions that would affect an estimated 50 million Americans and cost almost $13 billion in its first year by establishing a minimum income, work training, jobs and higher Social Security benefits for 27.4 million persons and other programs.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., generally a liberal and a former HEW secretary, complained that the measure did not set a high enough guaranteed income and that its passage would mean "millions of Americans will receive less by forcing the states to cut back on welfare."

"You put that with a very straight face, senator," Richardson retorted in a rare testy moment after trying to stay cool under hot television lights and intensive questioning. .

Ribicoff maintained that only nine states and Puerto Rico now pay more than the proposed $2,400 a year minimum for a four-member family on welfare and that the payment level would be less than that earned by a worker at the minimum wage.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast For Wednesday

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Sudden breaks and beginnings are featured in special relationships. Friend may attempt to involve you in legal tangle. Remember protect own interests

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). One in position of authority observes work methods. Strive for original approach Stress ability to be unique in expressing ideas. Some dependents may feel they deserve more attention — and money.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Friend who fascinates you may also create aura of confusion. Give full play to intellectual curiosity, ask questions—obtain answers. Have fun without going to added expense. Not necessary to buy your way.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Funds set aside for proverbial rainy day may have to be used. Key is to determine what is best for future security. Be comfortable without being extravagant. Study Gemini message. Be versatile.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Trying to overwhelm neighbor or relative will not work. Best now to win your way rather than to utilize forcing methods. Accent continues on short journeys, ideas which require further development.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Expenditures required for health, recreation may balloon out of proportion. Accept constructive changes. Another Virgo tells stories about Gemini associate. Separate fact from mere rumor.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22). You can assuage ruffled feelings Applies specifically to members of opposite sex One who means much to you deserves special consideration. Purchase of luxury item is favored. Lunar cycle high, take initiative

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov 21). Dream fulfilled only if you are ultra-practical One who attempts to persuade you otherwise is misinformed. Applies especially to property values. Avoid long-range commitments which tie up funds.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 Dec. 21): Emotions run deep; say what you mean, mean what you say. Some who make promises now are listening only to sound of their own voices. Respond accordingly. Take long-range view. Ignore inquisitive neighbor.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Money and position are emphasized. Added responsibility will bring greater reward. Obtain valid hint from Sagittarius message. Strive to complete projects. Spread your message via publicity, advertising.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Unusual and humorous mesage is highlighted Concerns one who is inventive, unorthodox and determined to influence your thoughts, actions. Maintain sense of balance. Welcome change but be familiar with odds.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Secret maneuvers draw your attention. Utilize intuitive intellect. Be analytical where hunches are concerned. Inner voice serves as reliable guide. Needed funds will be available.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY recent period of emotional harassment fades into mere memory. Be grateful; strive now to place barrier between yourself and situation which is debilitating. You are a creative, dynamic individual. Many claim you set too fast a pace. However, this can be chalked up to envy. Continue to adhere to natural inclinations. That recent setback is boomeranging in your favor. Know this and be confident.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast For Wednesday

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Sudden breaks and beginnings are featured in special relationships. Friend may attempt to involve you in legal tangle. Remember protect own interests.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): One in position of authority observes work methods. Strive for original approach. Stress ability to be unique in expressing ideas. Some dependents may feel they deserve more attention — and money.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Friend who fascinates you may also create aura of confusion. Give full play to intellectual curiosity, ask questions—obtain answers. Have fun without going to added expense. Not necessary to buy your way.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Funds set aside for proverbial rainy day may have to be used. Key is to determine what is best for future security. Be comfortable without being extravagant. Study Gemini message. Be versatile.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Trying to overwhelm neighbor or relative will not work. Best now to win your way rather than to utilize forcing methods. Accent continues on short journeys, ideas which require further development.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Expenditures required for health, recreation may balloon out of proportion. Accept constructive changes. Another Virgo tells stories about Gemini associate. Separate fact from mere rumor.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You can assuage ruffled feelings. Applies specifically to members of opposite sex. One who means much to you deserves special consideration. Purchase of luxury item is favored. Lunar cycle high; take initiative.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Dream fulfilled only if you are ultra-practical. One who attempts to persuade you otherwise is misinformed. Applies especially to property values. Avoid long-range commitments which tie up funds.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emotions run deep; say what you mean, mean what you say. Some who make promises now are listening only to sound of their own voices. Respond accordingly. Take long-range view. Ignore inquisitive neighbor.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Money and position are emphasized. Added responsibility will bring greater reward. Obtain valid hint from Sagittarius message. Strive to complete projects. Spread your message via publicity, advertising.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Unusual and humoruos mesage is highlighted. Concerns one who is inventive, unorthodox and determined to influence your thoughts, actions. Maintain sense of balance. Welcome change but be familiar with odds.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Secret maneuvers draw your attention. Utilize intuitive intellect. Be analytical where hunches are concerned. Inner voice serves as reliable guide. Needed funds will be available.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY recent period of emotional harassment fades into mere memory. Be grateful; strive now to place barrier between yourself and situation which is debilitating. You are a creative, dynamic individual. Many claim you set too fast a pace. However, this can be chalked up to envy. Continue to adhere to natural inclinations. That recent setback is boomeranging in your favor. Know this and be confident.

Price Of Gold Attains A New Two-Year High

©The New York Times

Paris — Fresh worries about the dollar intensified market activity in gold Tuesday, lifting the price to around $42 an ounce, the highest level in two years.

Demand for the metal strengthened in London, Zurich and Paris as European newspapers and financial services reported that American gold stocks have fallen below $10 billion for the first time.

The Treasury announced Monday that gold stocks during June dropped by $61 million to $10.507 billion.

But this includes priority claims of $548 million against American gold by the International Monetary Fund. Taking these into account, the net gold holdings were $9.979 billion.

Additionally, the West German Central Bank holds what it maintains is a prior claim on the gold stocks of $500 million — a result of a gold sale to the United States by the Bundesbank when it was short of dollars after the 1969 upvaluation of the mark.

It has been a long-held tenet of some bankers and finance officials in Europe that the United States for strategic reasons would never permit its bullion reserves to dip below $10 billion.

Despite privately voiced denials by American authorities that any such rigid policy thinking exists, there are growing expectations in Europe that Washington may declare a gold embargo. Under an embargo, the dollar would no longer be convertible into gold in international transactions

Some Europeans reason that this could lead to a series of events culminating in an upward valuation in the official gold price, which was held at $35 an ounce for nearly three decades.

In private conversations many central bankers in Europe express the belief that gold upvaluaton is now needed to engineer a devaluation of the dollar.

One theory is that if the United States does not act, the Europeans will act by upvaluing gold against their own currencies and floating their currencies against the dollar, this, it is argued, could force Washington's hand.

The big question is whether sufficient unity exists among European nations to act in concert on a major monetary issue.

Large dollar outflows, which are continuing, according to a recent study by the Morgan Guaranty Trust Company, have raised the issue of the dollar's health.

CORONA . . . pleads innocent to murders.

Corona: 'Not Guilty Sir'; Trial Is Set For Oct. 5

Yuba City, Calif. (UPI) — Juan V. Corona pleaded innocent Tuesday to charges of slaying 25 transient farm laborers along the Feather River

Superior Court Judge John G. Hauck set Corona's trial for Oct. 5.

"Not guilty, sir," the defendant said in a loud, clear voice to each of the 25 counts of murder read by the judge.

Health Is Bad

The judge set the trial date after Corona's physician, Dr. Thomas Leavenworth described Corona's health. Leavenworth said his "best educated guess" was that Corona would not be physically fit to face the rigors of a long trial before Sept. 20 at the earliest.

Corona, 37, suffered a heart attack June 18 at the Sutter County jail in Marysville.

Corona's attorney Richard Hawk said during the arraignment that he would definitely seek a change of venure to a metropolitan area.

Hawk was also granted permission by Judge Hauck to examine color slides and microscopic slides taken by county pathologists on the 25 victims. Another motion allowed Hawk to examine 62 items listed in the transcript of the grand jury which indicted Corona.

Behavior Good

Corona sat quietly during the proceedings, not even turning around to look at his wife, mother and two brothers seated in the third row of the tiny courtroom.

Leavenworth told the court Corona "seems to be doing quite well although he's losing a little weight."

After the appearance deputies manacled Corona to return him to jail and Leavenworth asked him, "Do you feel okay?"

"Yes," answered Corona.

"Are you nervous?"

"No," the suspect said.

Corona, a farm labor contractor was only charged with 10 murders until the grand jury indictment added another 15 early this month. All the victims were found buried near Yuba City in May and early June

Medina Jury Is Tentatively Seated

Ft. McPherson, Ga. (UPI) — A jury was tentatively seated Tuesday to hear the court martial of Capt. Ernest L. Medina, charged with murdering, or permitting his troops to murder, 102 South Vietnamese villagers at My Lai.

The fourth and fifth jurors tentatively seated were Lt. Col. Bobby G. Berryhill, 39, of Decatur, Ga., and Lt. Col. Philip T. Blanton, 40, of Tampa, Fla.

Court-martial panels are made up of not less than five, nor more than 10 officers, and thus the acceptance of Berryhill and Blanton fulfilled the minimum requirement.

Three more prospective jurors from the initial venire panel of 10 will be questioned Wednesday.

Maj. Howell Hobson Jordan Jr., a bachelor from Cocoa Beach, Fla., was disqualified as a juror Tuesday after saying that through extensive reading he has concluded "there was a massacre" at My Lai and that Medina is innocent.

Col. Kenneth A. Howard, the military judge, sustained a prosecution challenge against Jordan, saying that each side was entitled to an equal standing in a juror's mind at the commencement of the trial.

F. Lee Bailey, Medina's civilian attorney, argued that Jordan was qualified "unless we want the most ignorant and unread persons on this panel."

Following adjournment Tuesday, Bailey indicated the jury was acceptable to him as it now stands.

"We have a court, and unless the prosecutor should strike one by peremptory challenge, we have a court even if we seat none of the three majors to be questioned tomorrow."

Once a jury is seated, a seven to 10 day recess will be called while both sides round up their witnesses. Testimony in the case probably will not begin until the second week in August.

The second and third jurors were tentatively accepted during Tuesday morning's session. They were Col. Robert E. Nelson Jr., 42, Eatonton, Ga., and Lt. Col. Clarence Cook, 44, of Chicago, the first Negro accepted to sit in any of the My Lai cases.

Home Damaged By Blaze In Attack On Hornets' Nest

A fire at the John Schubert residence at 5540 Saylor Tuesday afternoon resulted in "considerable" fire damage and "moderate" smoke and water damage to the building, according to district fire chief, Neil McPherson.

McPherson said the fire was caused by two boys trying to burn out a nest of hornets with a homemade torch.

The fire which took approximately 20 minutes to bring under control was confined to the attic area of the building, McPherson said, adding that it broke through the roof in several places.

McPherson said that no one was injured in the blaze.

Price Of Gold Attains A New Two-Year High

©The New York Times

Paris — Fresh worries about the dollar intensified market activity in gold Tuesday, lifting the price to around $42 an ounce, the highest level in two years.

Demand for the metal strengthened in London, Zurich and Paris as European newspapers and financial services reported that American gold stocks have fallen below $10 billion for the first time.

The Treasury announced Monday that gold stocks during June dropped by $61 million to $10.507 billion.

But this includes priority claims of $548 million against American gold by the International Monetary Fund. Taking these into account, the net gold holdings were $9.979 billion.

Additionally, the West German Central Bank holds what it maintains is a prior claim on the gold stocks of $500 million — a result of a gold sale to the United States by the Bundesbank when it was short of dollars after the 1969 upvaluation of the mark.

It has been a long-held tenet of some bankers and finance officials in Europe that the United States for strategic reasons would never permit its bullion reserves to dip below $10 billion.

Despite privately voiced denials by American authorities that any such rigid policy thinking exists, there are growing expectations in Europe that Washington may declare a gold embargo. Under an embargo, the dollar would no longer be convertible into gold in international transactions

Some Europeans reason that this could lead to a series of events culminating in an upward valuation in the official gold price, which was held at $35 an ounce for nearly three decades.

In private conversations many central bankers in Europe express the belief that gold upvaluaton is now needed to engineer a devaluation of the dollar.

One theory is that if the United States does not act, the Europeans will act by upvaluing gold against their own currencies and floating their currencies against the dollar, this, it is argued, could force Washington's hand.

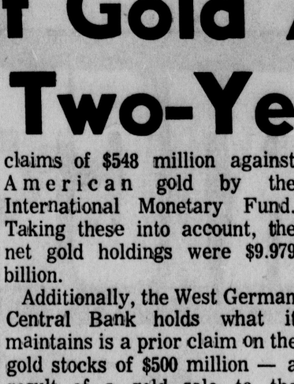

The big question is whether sufficient unity exists among European nations to act in concert on a major monetary issue.

Large dollar outflows, which are continuing, according to a recent study by the Morgan Guaranty Trust Company, have raised the issue of the dollar's health.

This comment by a European central banker is stypical of the feelings here: "The dollar is overvalued in terms of what the United States is trying to do in the world."

The dollars held by foreign governments are about three times higher than American gold reserves.

Plea Bargain Rules Sought In High Court

The Nebraska Supreme Court was asked Tuesday to set down rules to be followed by prosecuting attorneys in connection with criminal case plea bargains.

The vehicle for the request was an appeal of the Gage County District Court second degree murder conviction of Fred L. Kimes. He was convicted for the 1970 killing of Mrs. Minnie M. Kaminska of Beatrice.

Kime's attorneys said the county attorney failed to live up to his part of a bargain, which included the dropping of first degree murder charges and the recommendation of a 40-year prison sentence in return for a plea of guilty.

It was noted the prosecutor lived up to part of the bargain by filing the second degree murder charge.

The attorneys said while in every situation, the person charged "takes the risk that the judge will not follow the suggestions in imposing sentence," he should not have to worry about whether the prosecutor will live up to his word.

"To give judicial credence to this practice will chill and place apprehension in the minds of defendants and defense attorneys," the attorneys said in their brief.

"And in the Kimes case, a new sentence hearing was requested, along with the bargaining guidelines.

"There must be a clearly established duty in Nebraska for prosecutors to honor plea bargains, and objective standards for the fair treatment of individual guilty plea defendants are necessary," the appeal brief said.

"The attorneys noted the district court judge did, in fact, hand down a 40-year prison sentence. But it was also noted this was done despite the county attorney's failure to abide by the plea bargain and his subsequent recommendation to the judge that Kimes be sentenced to 50 years in prison.

Had the prosecutor made his agreed upon recommendation, the attorneys said, it is "open to speculation" whether a lesser sentence would have been handed down.

The brief also said it was not until some time after the sentence hearing was held that the judge learned of the plea bargain.

Richardson Likes House Measure

Washington (AP) — Welfare Secretary Elliot L. Richardson supported the House-passed welfare-social security bill Tuesday as including "every practicable means of assisting the poor to work their way out of poverty."

The bill, he told the Senate Finance Committee, includes income support, job training and placement, vocational rehabilitation, employment and family services, including child care.

And, he insisted, it includes "strong financial incentives to work."

Under the program, he said, "a person who works will always be better off than a person who does not work."

The work incentive provisions were challenged by Chairman Russell B. Long, D-La., who contended the bill is full of "work disincentives."

In many cases, Long said, "a family's total income would be reduced as the family's earnings rose."

Long said the Finance Committee "is not willing to provide a guaranteed income to an able-bodied individual who is unwilling to do anything useful for that income."

Richardson called attention to an $800 penalty, subtracted from the proposed $2,400 minimum welfare payment for a family of four, for refusing to accept employment.

And, he said, the first $720 of annual earnings, plus one-third of the remainder up to a $4,140 annual income cutoff, would be retained by the family.

Long also objected that the administration bill does nothing about requiring a common l a w husband to use his income for the support of illegitimate children.

To give the mother and children welfare benefits without allowances for the income of the father provides "a premium on illegitimacy and a cash bonus (not to marry," he said.

Long contended that 50 per cent of persons on the welfare rolls "are benefitting from this type of corruption."

Sen. Jack Miller, R-Iowa, told Richardson that a "major hangup" on the guaranteed income within the Senate committee is the failure to provide for regional cost-of-living differentials.

"I think it is inequitable to pay a person in New York City the same as a person in a little town in Alabama," he said. Richardson said there is insufficient data to measure differentials by regions.

He said the proposed welfare program would cost the federal taxpayer about $5.5 billion more in the first year, but would reduce state costs by $1.6 billion.

Initially, he said, the bill would add about 8 million working poor families, including 5 million children, to the welfare rolls. But by the mid-1970's, he said, actual caseloads are expected to be smaller than under the rapidly growing current programs of aid to families with d e p e n d e n t children.

Off-Track Betting Corporation Gives First Loan Payment To New York

©The New York Times

New York — The Off-Track Betting Corporation made the first repayment Tuesday on its $4.8-million loan from the city.

Mayor John V. Lindsay accepted the $400,000 check at City Hall from Howard Samuels, OTB president, who said the payment would be "the first of many."

But Samuels indicated doubt that OTB would be able to generate the $50 million income profit that is projected for this fiscal year in the precariously balanced municipal budget.

The loan would be repaid by December, he said, and the rest of the year should provide some $25 million income for the city treasury.

What about the $50 million figure that the mayor, voicing reluctance, had listed in order to balance his budget? An OTB aide pondered the question later in the day, then said:

"It would be a real long shot."

In accepting the check in a ceremony at City Hall Lindsay expressed the cautious hope that the $50 million figure might be achieved.

It was a number that he was forced to list in his budget for the fiscal year ending next June 30 by the Board of Estimate and the City Council, he noted.

Vision-17 Hires Magazine Editor As Coordinator

George H. Frye of Des Moines, who has served several years as editor of Business and Industry Magazine, will join the staff of Vision-17 next week as regional coordinator.

The announcement was made Tuesday by Jack Wolken of Tecumseh, acting president of Vision-17, an e c o n o m i c d e v e l o p m e n t organization embracing 17 s o u t h e a s t Nebraska counties.

Kingery Appears Low Bidder For Adding 2 Floors

Kingery Construction Co. of Lincoln was the apparent low bidder at $550,639 for construction of two additional floors on the existing Department of Labor, Division of Employment office building at 550 So. 16th.

Karl Kost, chief of the fiscal division, said seven offers were submitted, ranging from the apparent low to $609,136.

The project contract will not be awarded until the first week of August, according to Kost.

He said the addition was necessary to accommodate new federal programs and the expanded coverage of existing programs.

Judge Dismisses Bank's Lawsuit

Lancaster District Judge William Hastings has dismissed a civil suit filed by Lincoln Bank East against the State Banking Department and some Lincoln banks.

The plaintiff's suit represented an appeal from the Banking Department's rejection of its application for a charter for a bank at the southwest corner of 70th and O Sts.

The defendants successfully pleaded that an option on property which the bank had held had been cancelled since the application was filed, and this represented a material variance in the application, rendering the appeal moot.

Model Wisconsin Penal Institution Impresses Solon

Sen. Terry Carpenter, after a visit to a model penal institution at Fox Lake, Wis., said Tuesday Nebraska could use something similar.

The Scottsbluff lawmaker was one of several members of the Legislature's Judiciary Committee who visited the Wisconsin institution Monday.

Carpenter called it an "amazing experience," referring to what he said was "a new approach to the rehabilitation of young men and men of medium age in the field of education, including the vocational trades. .

"I think the state (Nebraska) ought to do something about this, even to the extent of submitting a multi million dollar bond issue to the people in the next primary election, after a program of education to indicate to them this is a very cheap proce to pay for the results that have been accomplished in other states."

Richardson Likes House Measure

Washington (AP) — Welfare Secretary Elliot L. Richardson supported the House-passed welfare-social security bill Tuesday as including "every practicable means of assisting the poor to work their way out of poverty."

The bill, he told the Senate Finance Committee, includes income support, job training and placement, vocational rehabilitation, employment and family services, including child care.

And, he insisted, it includes "strong financial incentives to work."

Under the program, he said, "a person who works will always be better off than a person who does not work."

The work incentive provisions were challenged by Chairman Russell B. Long, D-La., who contended the bill is full of "work disincentives."

In many cases, Long said, "a family's total income would be reduced as the family's earnings rose."

Long said the Finance Committee "is not willing to provide a guaranteed income to an able-bodied individual who is unwilling to do anything useful for that income."

Richardson called attention to an $800 penalty, subtracted from the proposed $2,400 minimum welfare payment for a family of four, for refusing to accept employment

And, he said, the first $720 of annual earnings, plus one-third of the remainder up to a $4,140 annual income cutoff, would be retained by the family.

Long also objected that the administration bill does nothing about requiring a common law husband to use his income for the support of illegitimate children.

To give the mother and children welfare benefits without allowances for the income of the father provides "a premium on illegitimacy and a cash bonus (not to marry," he said.

Long contended that 50 per cent of persons on the welfare rolls "are benefitting from this type of corruption."

Sen. Jack Miller, R-Iowa, told Richardson that a "major hangup" on the guaranteed income within the Senate committee is the failure to provide for regional cost-of-living differentials.

"I think it is inequitable to pay a person in New York City the same as a person in a little town in Alabama," he said. Richardson said there is insufficient data to measure differentials by regions.

He said the proposed welfare program would cost the federal taxpayer about $5.5 billion more in the first year, but would reduce state costs by $1.6 billion.

Initially, he said, the bill would add about 8 million working poor families, including 5 million children, to the welfare rolls. But by the mid-1970's, he said, actual caseloads are expected to be smaller than under the rapidly growing current programs of aid to families with dependent children.

Off-Track Betting Corporation Gives First Loan Payment To New York

©The New York Times

New York — The Off-Track Betting Corporation made the first repayment Tuesday on its $4.8-million loan from the city.

Mayor John V. Lindsay accepted the $400,000 check at City Hall from Howard Samuels, OTB president, who said the payment would be "the first of many."

But Samuels indicated doubt that OTB would be able to generate the $50 million income profit that is projected for this fiscal year in the precariously balanced municipal budget.

The loan would be repaid by December, he said, and the rest of the year should provide some $25 million income for the city treasury.

What about the $50 million figure that the mayor, voicing reluctance, had listed in order to balance his budget? An OTB aide pondered the question later in the day, then said:

"It would be a real long shot."

In accepting the check in a ceremony at City Hall Lindsay expressed the cautious hope that the $50 million figure might be achieved.

It was a number that he was forced to list in his budget for the fiscal year ending next June 30 by the Board of Estimate and the City Council, he noted.

Senators Hear Recital Of Organized Crime Dominance In Nation's Rackets

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON

Washington (AP) — Exchanging the criminal code of silence for a promise of immunity from prosecution, the hugely fat, self-described grandson of a Mafia don gave senators Monday a recital of organized crime dominance in the nation's rackets.

Vincent "Big Vinnie" Teresa, 42, who said his friends call him "The Bear," claimed to have once given a Cadillac to the late Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier, president of Haiti.

The names Teresa recited to the Senate rackets committee included Meyer Lansky, whom he said was a silent partner behind the George Raft gambling casino in London, and Raymond Patriarcha, who he said is his former underwold sponsor and leader of organized crime in New England.

For himself, Teresa said he committed his first burglary while in the seventh grade, went on to rob a Boston tomato packing plant and graduated to phony checks, big-league gambling, loansharking, stolen and forged credit cards and finally a lucrative business in counterfeit and stolen securities.

Teresa, who said he was born in Revere, Mass., is currently serving a five-year federal prison term for interstate transportation of stolen securities. He has been granted immunity from further prosecution by a federal court order and is under armed guard while testifying.

Teresa said his loansharking centered for a while around a firm called The Piranha Co., a title "taken from the fish of that name which is a maneater."

He said reluctant borrowers were persuaded to pay up under threats of having a hand stuck in a fishbowl in the Piranha Co. office in Boston.

The bowl contained a live piranha, he said. Teresa described himself as a "gambling dgenerate," a man who gambled away everything he stole.

He said he also accommodated those similarly afflicted, describing how he and his partners went into the international gambling junket business to "meet suckers" and "make them obligated."

Teresa said his grandfather was a Mafia don and that his uncle, Dominick "Sandy mac" Teresa, was for about 30 years a bodyguard of Joseph Lombardi, former "boss of the Boston mob."

"I knew these people when I was 13 or 14 years old," he said. "They treated me like a son."

He said his uncle in 1955 "introduced me to all the mob people in Boston at that particular time" and added that Lombardi hosted monthly mob conclaves at this Pine Tree Farm near Framingham, Mass., "which were attended by leading mob leaders from all over the country."

More than a decade ago the Senate Permanent Investigations Committee heard Joseph Valachi make the phrase "Cosa Nostra" a household word.

Testifying before the same committee, Teresa declared "I never heard the term 'Cosa Nostra' until Joe Valachi used it.

"But there is one big gang that runs organized crime in this country. We generally call it 'The Mob.' New young people who become members call it 'The Outfit.'"

Teresa said that at one point his associates got interested in sending gambling junkets to Haiti.

"We had an 'in' down there with Papa Doc — the president of Haiti, Papa Doc Duvalier — that we could get a gambling license anytime we wanted," Teresa said. "I gave Papa Doc a Cadillac."

He said he was propositioned by Joe Kirk, who he said was running a casino in Haiti for the syndicate to build a hotel and casino.

But he indicated the deal did not go through and that a later trip to Haiti was canceled on rumors of an imminent revolution.

He described also his dealings in the credit card racket, saying he bought hundreds of forged credit cards a year, and bribed headwaiters for their lists of "hot" credit cards supplied by leading companies.

"I know something about how we whacked the city of Miami with stolen and counterfeit credit cards, and I don't know how the city survived, because everybody was doing it," Teresa said.

He said his entrance into the stolen security racket was arranged in a "sitdown" negotiation with mob figures in Brooklyn and that the meeting led, at the end of January 1969, to a five-hour session in which he selected $5 million in stolen Gulf & Western stock from a closet full of stolen securities.

He said he was led to the closet in an empty Brooklyn apartment building by Frank Cangiano, a man he described as a major east coast fence.

Tidal Waves, Tremors Rock Australian Island Chains

Port Moresby, Australia (UPI) — Tidal waves and continuing tremors from Monday's strong earthquake rocked the Bismarck Archipelago Islands of New Britain and New Ireland Tuesday.

Government officials on the islands reported to Port Moresby, 500 miles to the southwest, that tremors registering 6.5 on the Richter Scale were recorded Tuesday in the southern part of New Britain Island and that a tidal wave had smashed as far as one half mile inland on New Ireland Island to the northeast.

There have been no reports of casualties since the major earthquake, registering 8.3 on the Richter Scale struck Monday. But aircraft observation of the area hit by a tidal wave said there were no signs of life among smashed buildings.

On New Britain, the larger of the two islands off the northeastern tip of New Guinea, the area around the city of Rabaul was reported to be the worst damaged. Other damage was reported in the Kimbe area about 150 miles southwest of Rabaul.

Officials said private aircraft have been chartered to fly emergency food, medicine and shelter supplies to Kimbe, where another earthquake caused extensive damage two weeks ago.

Eight Australian naval ships have been alerted and are standing by to evacuate residents of New Britain and to provide further emergency rescue operations, officials said.

Officials said private aircraft have been chartered to fly emergency food, medicine and shelter supplies to Kimbe, where another earthquake caused extensive damage two weeks ago.

Eight Australian naval ships have been alerted and are standing by to evacuate residents of New Britain and to provide further emergency rescue operations, officials said.

MISS DIANE COLLINS

This morning Mr. and Mrs. Myron R. Collins of Columbus make announcement of the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Diane, to Timothy Busing, son of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Busing, son of Mrs. Keith Busing and the late Mr. Busing.

The wedding is planned for Saturday, Sept. 4.

Both Miss Collins and her fiance are former students at the University of Nebraska.

MISS KAREN HAYS

Announcement is made this morning by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hays of the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Karen, to Richard Oliver, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Oliver.

Saturday, Oct. 23, has been chosen as the date of the wedding.

Miss Hays is a former student at the University of Nebraska.

Courtesies For Julie Bathel

A popular soon-to-be bride, Miss Julie Bathel is on the courtesy merry-go-round these days. For example — there was a bath and linen shower in her honor on Saturday afternoon, July 17, when the hostess for the luncheon held at the University Club, was Mrs. Oscar F. Humble.

On Saturday afternoon, June 26, the members of the Gretna Shower Committee were hostesses at a miscellaneous shower for Miss Bathel at the Resurrection Lutheran Church in Gretna.

The bride-elect's Delta Zeta sorority sisters presented her with a grocery shower on Wednesday evening, May 19. Miss Marion Westendorf was hostess for the party which was held at the Delta Zeta Chapter House at the University of Nebraska.

Mrs. Raymond Rediger will entertain Miss Bathel at a miscellaneous shower at her home on Friday evening, Aug. 6.

On Saturday afternoon, July 31, Mrs. Harold William Bathel will be hostess to the feminine members of the bridal party and the reception servers when she entertains at a luncheon to be held at Hotel Radisson-Cornhusker.

Miss Bathel wil entertain the feminine members of the bridal entourage at a courtesy to be held at her parents' home on Wednesday evening, Aug. 11, and on Thursday evening, Aug. 12, Mr. and Mrs. Bathel will preside at a family dinner at their home in honor of the their daughter and Mr. Nefsky.

Miss Bathel and her fiance will again share honors on Friday evening, Aug. 13, at a prenuptial dinner for which Mr. Nefsky's parents will be host and hostess at the Legionnaire Club following the wedding rehearsal at the church.

The bride-to-be is a senior in elementary education at the University of Nebraska where she is a member of Delta Zeta sorority.

Mr. Nefsky is a senior at the University of Nebraska where he majored in electrica engineering and is affiliated with Triangle fraternity.

TALK OF THE TOWN

This is 'swan song' week for the month of July. That means that within a few short weeks summer will be packing up its good days, its bad days, its sunshine and storms in preparation for a sojourn on the continent to the south of us. All of this, of course, is in the future tense, and our interest as far as the current morning is concerned, is news of the present.

* * *

News of guests always is delightful even though it doesn't come under the heading of unusual — and this morning we have two visitors — one from Florida, and the other from Arizona — to mention.

The guest, or perhaps we should use the plural and make it 'guests' from Florida are Mrs. Michael Baxter and her 15 months-old son, Michael who are the house guests of Mrs. Baxter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Stohlman.

This morning Mrs. Stohlman will pay courtesy to her daughter when she entertains at a 10 o'clock coffee at her home. The guest list will be composed of three generations and will include friends of Mrs. Baxter's — their mothers and their children — 20 in all. Mrs. Baxter and her son will leave on Sunday to return home.

* * *

Our visitor from Tucson, Ariz., is a member of the teen set, and her name is Miss Laurie Musil. The young Miss Musil arrived a few days ago to spend a few weeks as the guest of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Max Scherer.

* * *

The name Joel R. Power may not even cause a ripple in your memory, but there are countless in Lincoln, especially Kappa Kappa Gamma alumnae of the late 50's vintage who will remember Mrs. Power.

We have just learned that Mr. and Mrs. Power and their two children, Andrew and Mary, are moving to Homewood, Ill. — a suburb of Chicago. Mr. Power, it seems, has accepted a position as press representative for the American Oil Co., with headquarters in Chicago.

Now about Mrs. Power — She is the former Sharon Newman whose parents resided in Lincoln for a number of years and who, as we mentioned before, is a Kappa Kappa Gamma at Nebraska.

Bridal Attendants Named

Miss Amy Kristin Andersen, former coed at the University of Nebraska and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roland D. Andersen, has chosen Mrs. Randall Friendt and her sister, Miss Rebecca Andersen, as her honor attendants for her wedding, which will be an event of Saturday, Aug. 7.

Miss Andersen, who will become the bride of Larry Feerhusen at a 1:30 o'clock service, to be solemnized at Christ Lutheran Church, will have as her bridesmatrons Mrs. Charles Snell, III, and Mrs. Dan Foreman. The bridesmaids will be Miss Diane Kahler and Miss Carol Lewandowski. Miss Kathy Hergenrader of Omaha will be the flower girl.

Lighting the chancel candles will be Miss Julie Metzger.

David Feerhusen will serve his brother as best man. They are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Feerhusen. The groomsmen will be Andy Andersen, brother of the bride-elect; George Boosalis, Norm Hill, Steve Moser, and Tom Flack. Seating the guests will be Bill Timmerman, Randal Friendt, Les Tyrrell, and Miss Andersen's brother, Dick Andersen.

The popular soon-to-be bride was honored at a luncheon and hostess shower on Tuesday afternoon, July 20, when Mrs. Phil Stetlinger entertained a group of guests at the Hillcrest Country Club.

A miscellaneous shower was presented to Miss Andersen on Sunday afternoon, July 18. Hostess for the courtesy was Mrs. Virgil Heidtbrink who was assisted by Mrs. W. V. Tyrrell.

On Tuesday evening, July 6, Mrs. Cecil Metzger and her daughter, Miss Marcee Metzger, were hostesses in courtesy to Miss Andersen at a miscellaneous shower held at their home.

Mrs. Borys Wawryszczuk and her daughter, Miss Emily Ann, entertained at a pottery shower for the bride-to-be on Tuesday evening, June 29, and on Friday evening, June 25, Miss Andersen was presented a miscellaneous shower when Miss Carol Lewandowski and Miss Carol Dendinger entertained a group of guests at the home of Miss Lewandowski.

A miscellaneous shower was presented to the bride-elect on Wednesday evening, June 23, when Mrs. John Roux was hostess at her home. Mrs. Gary Kuebler and Mrs. Robert Holloway were assisting hostesses.

Miss Andersen's social calendar reveals several more courtesies in the future, including a luncheon and linen shower which will be held at The Knolls on Wednesday afternoon, July 28. Hostess for the party will be Mrs. Ralph Slocum.

Mrs. William Dahlstrom was hostess in courtesy to the bride-elect at a personal shower on Tuesday evening, July 27, and on Saturday afternoon, July 31, Mrs. Del Gould, and Mrs. Richard Hergenrader of Omaha will entertain at a bridesmaids' luncheon and shower which will be held at the home of Mrs. Gould.

On Friday evening, Aug. 6, Mr. Feerhusen's parents will entertain in prenuptial courtesy to their son and his fiancee at a rehearsal dinner to be held at the Hillcrest Country Club following the wedding rehearsal at the church.

Miss Andersen is careering in Lincoln.

Mr. Feerhusen attends the University of Nebraska.

A Child's World

By PHYLLIS WOOLLEN

(Editor's Note: This begins a series of articles on child development and psychology which will appear each week in the Lincoln Star Women's section.)

Until not so many years ago, child rearing was in essence a matter of a mother's intuition. In today's changing world parents are taking a new look at rearing their children viewing the process through educated and psychoanlytic eyes. In many instances, the drama of rearing a child is no longer a case of hit and miss, but a studied and carefully evaluated input.

According to Mrs. Phyllis Conway of the University of Nebraska Educational Psychology division, a child's environment and genetic endowment have to interact. If a child has potential, his environment must be arranged to induce development of that potential.

Basically, ther are two important attitudes in child rearing, Mrs. Conway suggests. The establishment of mutual trust and respect between parent, or adult, and child, and behavior modification or changing the behavior of the child through reaction and reinforcement.

Under the first heading of mutual trust and respect, Mrs. Conway notes that an adult must respect a child for his capabilities as well as his limitations. In other words, a child must be given the same treatment and respect as an adult within his own realm.

The theory of behavior modification is, briefly, that the behavior of a child should be observed relevant to the circumstances surrounding that behavior. Children learn what works for them within their environment. Anything reinforcing can maintain a specific behavior.

Hand in hand with both attitudes is the philosophy of recognizing success and listening to a child when he talks to you. Every child is entitled to know the feeling of success, the feeling that he is competent.

THE LINCOLN STAR, WEDNESDAY, JULY 28

Money Matters

BY LINDA OLIG

What is it that comes in all shapes and sizes and substances, has hundreds of names applied to it, and, most of all, has a profound influence on the lives of each of us?

Money, of course!

Money is round, square, rectangular. Once beads, pigskins, stones, and the like were used for bartering; now we use coins and paper. A unit of money is called a franc, mark, ruble, dollar, lire, or pound — depending on where you are spending it.

Money is used for many reasons — to satisfy ambitions, as a medium of exchange, as a mean to attain a goal, for survival — the list is endless.

Because of our interdpendent society, people are necessarily money conscious today. That's what this series of columns is all about — MONEY, how to save it and how to spend it. Wisely!

The purpose of this series is to tell you where people go wrong in handling money; how to budget; how to save on your purchases and repairs; borrowing, saving, taxes, charges and checks investments and so forth and so on.

Money, by itself, is of little value. That cookie jar full of money means very little. And so does that money-stuffed mattress, unless it makes the sleeping softer. The real value of money is in using it wisely.

It is good to save money for an emergency or for a pleasure or a luxury, such as a boat, family vacation, fur coat or college education.

But there is more than that to money — it doesn't go as far as it used to. Take food, for example, the prices have gone up considerably during the past few years — and salt is about the only staple that has remained fairly constant in price. Chewing gum used to be a penny a stick, now it is seven sticks for a dime or five for seven cents.

The increase may be only in cents, but those pennies add up — just ask any child who has a well-guarded piggy bank.

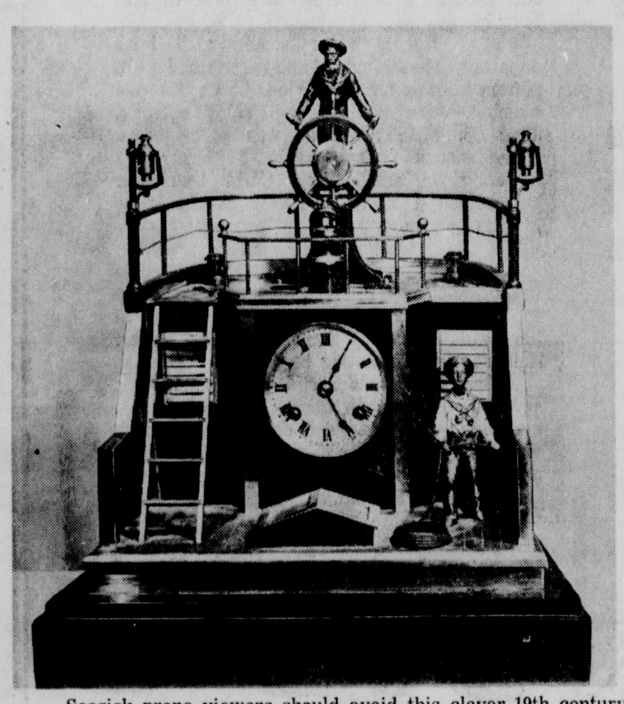

Thrift is an important password in today's living, and the majority of people are doing well in spending their money wisely, according to Walter Nolte of the First National Bank. He credits this to the fact that people, generally, are more intelligent and are better informed today. There is a wealth of financially informative material available today — just for the asking — and few people ruthlessly get into financial trouble. But, for those who do, there is the debt consolidation service. More about that later.

Handling money, like so many other things in life, is a matter of personalities. "Everyone is hopeful that he eventually will progress and have the ability to maintain the standard of living he enjoys," said Mr. Nolte. Most individuals make it; unfortunately, some never attain their goals, and some are painstakingly slow.

"There also are so many intervals in our lives where we cannot grow up within our incomes," said Mr. Nolte. Examples of this are life during the military service or college.

He added: "It is painful to go back, once you have attained a certain level." Therefore, if both the husband and wife are working and have approached the individual income level anticipated, it is advisable to save one income or the other — if the wife suddenly has to quit working and stay at home it can become a financial burden on the entire family with the loss of her income. One cannot expect to spend more than the income will permit.

Seasick prone viewers should avoid this clever 19th century clock. The ship slowly sways back and forth. It is a brass clock made about 1875 in France.

BY RALPH AND TERRY KOVEL

Few clocks could make you seasick, but one very rare model seems to have this in mind. Clocks that "moved" were in fashion during the last half of the 19th century. They were clocks with girls that rolled their eyes, bounced on a swing, figures that struck the time, birds that moved and even a mouse that ran up the clock. All types of unusual moving figures intrigued the clock maker. A few animated clocks had been made in the preceding one hundred years. By the 1875s, this type of clock was factory made in quantity.

One rare moving clock was the French helmsman clock. The man at the wheel of a ship moved back and forth simulating the rocking motion of the waves. A clock on the center of the ship's cabin indicated the time while the helmsman rocked and a boy coiled rope. Watching the clock was like sitting on a moving boat.

Bargains in antiques are not as hard to find as one would think. The trick is to know more about the antique than the seller. Some dealers specialize in glass, furniture, or some other rather limited area. If one of these specialists should buy a piece that is not quite in his area of sales, he will often sell it at a low price to move it quickly. This is why dealers buy from each other.

You must know your type of antique and its value. There is no one that can be expert in every field of antiques.

After you have collected and studied, you can find "sleepers" at house sales, garage sales, barn sales, thrift shops, resale shops, and well known second hand stores like the Salvation Army. Sometimes, luck is with the collector. Watch the demolition of old buildings in your area. Architectural features such as carved wood, stained glass windows, ceramic tile from floors, fireplaces or metal wallpaper used on many fine 19th century homes are often crushed by the wreckers. We just paid a wrecker to save a ceramic tile head that was above the front door of a 70-year-old tile building.

Wrought iron fences, radiator grills, door knobs, hinges, stairposts and even a wooden ice box can be salvaged and used. Many old houses have unexpected antiques in the attic or cellar. Bottles often appear under old front porches or between the walls. If you want a bargain, you must keep a sharp eye and be willing to climb, dig, search, and befriend the wreckers.

The best spot for a free antique is the local trash collection. Old wooden chairs, tables, store containers, and other surprising pieces often appear as your neighbors' trash.

Unbelievable Elegance

Inspired by the Brandy Alexander, the sophisticated after-dinner drink, this delightful souffle has the same rich taste as the drink yet it's definitely low calorie. Brandy Alexander Souffle is a beauty of a dessert, piled high, and fluffy in texture. And the marvelous thing about it is that it requires no baking. Unflavored gelatine holds it high and buoyant as it chills. Since this gelatine has no flavor of its own, the characteristic flavors of brandy and creme de cacao are there to enjoy to the hilt. Yet would you believe Brandy Alexander Souffle has only 115 calories per serving!

To help the souffle reach a height above its dish, attach a strip of aluminum foil to the outside of the dish so that it rises 2 inches. Now you'll be able to mound the mixture to its stately height. When it's set, simply remove the foil. You can prepare Brandy Alexander Souffle as far in advance of dinner as you like, or even a day ahead, and it will be ready in the refrigerator to top off dinner whenever you need it.

BRANDY ALEXANDER SOUFFLE

1 envelope unflavored gelatine
1 cup skimmed milk, divided
4 eggs, separated
Non-nutritive sweetener equivalent to 1-3 cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons brandy
2 tablespoons creme de cacao
1-3 cup sugar

Soften gelatine in ½ cup cold milk in top of double boiler. In bowl, beat together egg yoks and remaining ½ cup milk. Add to gelatine mixture. Place over boiling water and cook, stirring constantly, until gelatine dissolves and mixture thickens slightly, about 5 minutes. Remove from heat; stir in non-nutritive sweetener, salt, brandy and creme de cacao. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon. Beat egg whites until stiff, but not dry; gradually add sugar and beat until very stiff. Fold into gelatine mixture. Turn into 4-cup souffle dish and chill several hours, until set. If desired, garnish with green grapes and mint sprigs.

YIELD: 8½-cup servings, 115 calories per serving.

Dull, Throbbing Pain Of Nervous Tension Headaches?

Anyone who suffers from tension headaches knows only too well how the throbbing pain can dull efficiency, play havoc with nerves and slow you down.

What's best to take? Clinical tests by doctors on over 500 patients who complained of tension headaches proved Anacin® relieves nervous tension headaches just as effectively as the expensive leading prescription. Yet Anacin needs no prescription and costs far less.

Here is other convincing evidence of the effectiveness of Anacin. A survey of over 1,600 specialists in internal medicine showed twice as many doctors said they would recommend the Anacin formula to relieve pain over that of the other leading extra-strength tablet. Yes, twice as many doctors prefer Anacin's formula.

You can trust Anacin to relieve headache pain in minutes. Then its nervous tension and painful pressure on nerves go, too. Anacin lets you do a better job. Lets you function better.

Despite its great strength, Anacin is not habit-forming. You can take it without getting an upset stomach. It makes good sense to take fast-acting, extra-strong Anacin Tablets.

A Child's World

By PHYLLIS WOOLLEN

(Editor's Note: This begins a series of articles on child development and psychology which will appear each week in the Lincoln Star Women's section.)

Until not so many years ago, child rearing was in essence a matter of a mother's intuition. In today's changing world parents are taking a new look at rearing their children viewing the process through educated and psychoanlytic eyes. In many instances, the drama of rearing a child is no longer a case of hit and miss, but a studied and carefully evaluated input.

According to Mrs. Phyllis Conway of the University of Nebraska Educational Psychology division, a child's environment and genetic endowment have to interact. If a child has potential, his environment must be arranged to induce development of that potential.

Basically, ther are two important attitudes in child rearing, Mrs. Conway suggests. The establishment of mutual trust and respect between parent, or adult, and child, and behavior modification or changing the behavior of the child through reaction and reinforcement.

Under the first heading of mutual trust and respect, Mrs. Conway notes that an adult must respect a child for his capabilities as well as his limitations. In other words, a child must be given the same treatment and respect as an adult within his own realm.

The theory of behavior modification is, briefly, that the behavior of a child should be observed relevant to the circumstances surrounding that behavior. Children learn what works for them within their environment. Anything reinforcing can maintain a specific behavior.

Hand in hand with both attitudes is the philosophy of recognizing success and listening to a child when he talks to you. Every child is entitled to know the feeling of success, the feeling that he is competent.

Money Matters

BY LINDA OLIG

What is it that comes in all shapes and sizes and substances, has hundreds of names applied to it, and, most of all, has a profound influence on the lives of each of us?

Money, of course!

Money is round, square, rectangular. Once beads, pigskins, stones, and the like were used for bartering; now we use coins and paper. A unit of money is called a franc, mark, ruble, dollar, lire, or pound — depending on where you are spending it.

Money is used for many reasons — to satisfy ambitions, as a medium of exchange, as a mean to attain a goal, for survival — the list is endless.

Because of our interdpendent society, people are necessarily money conscious today. That's what this series of columns is all about — MONEY, how to save it and how to spend it. Wisely!

The purpose of this series is to tell you where people go wrong in handling money; how to budget; how to save on your purchases and repairs; borrowing, saving, taxes, charges and checks investments and so forth and so on.

Money, by itself, is of little value. That cookie jar full of money means very little. And so does that money-stuffed mattress, unless it makes the sleeping softer. The real value of money is in using it wisely.

It is good to save money for an emergency or for a pleasure or a luxury, such as a boat, family vacation, fur coat or college education.

But there is more than that to money — it doesn't go as far as it used to. Take food, for example, the prices have gone up considerably during the past few years — and salt is about the only staple that has remained fairly constant in price. Chewing gum used to be a penny a stick, now it is seven sticks for a dime or five for seven cents.

The increase may be only in cents, but those pennies add up — just ask any child who has a well-guarded piggy bank.

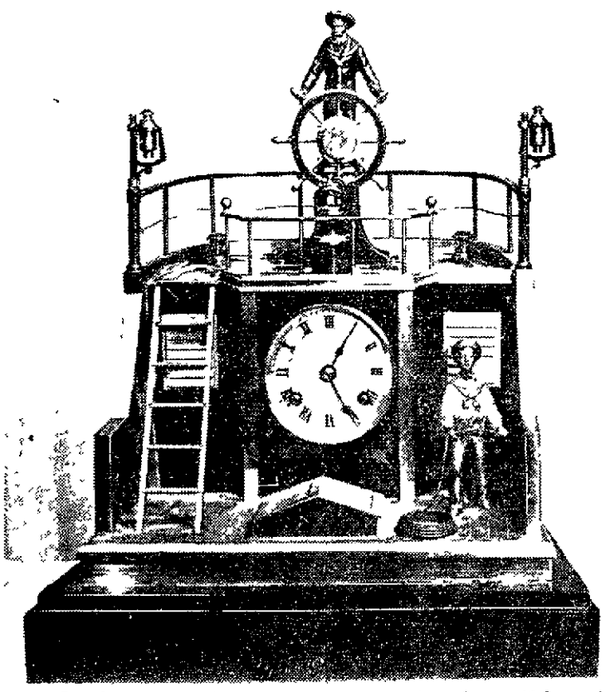

Thrift is an important password in today's living, and the majority of people are doing well in spending their money wisely, according to Walter Nolte of the First National Bank. He credits this to the fact that people, generally, are more intelligent and are better informed today. There is a wealth of financially informative material available today — just for the asking — and few people ruthlessly get into financial trouble. But, for those who do, there is the debt consolidation service. More about that later.

Handling money, like so many other things in life, is a matter of personalities. "Everyone is hopeful that he eventually will progress and have the ability to maintain the standard of living he enjoys," said Mr. Nolte. Most individuals make it; unfortunately, some never attain their goals, and some are painstakingly slow.

"There also are so many intervals in our lives where we cannot grow up within our incomes," said Mr. Nolte. Examples of this are life during the military service or college.

He added: "It is painful to go back, once you have attained a certain level." Therefore, if both the husband and wife are working and have approached the individual income level anticipated, it is advisable to save one income or the other — if the wife suddenly has to quit working and stay at home it can become a financial burden on the entire family with the loss of her income. One cannot expect to spend more than the income will permit.

Questions, Answers

Josephine Lowman

Q. I am wondering if you would answer some questions about dieting for me? The questions may help others who are trying to stick to their diet.

1. If you diet all week and "blow" yourself on weekends do you have to start all over on your diet?

2. Being a sweet nibbler at heart how many calories are in hard candies and caramels?

3. How much water should one drink? Why do some diets call for eight glasses of water a day?

A. The answer to the first question depends on how much you "blow" yourself on weekends. If you mean to ask if you can gain as much over the weekend as you lost during the week, the answer is YES. It is entirely possible. In fact many women have discovered that weekend indulgence was the one factor which made them fail in their effort to lose pounds.

You can take a few small liberties on weekends if you cut your calories lower than usual on the day preceding and following the weekend. However, if you really go overboard with the feed bag on weekends, you are doomed.

2. Sour balls or lemon drops have about 15 calories each. Forget the caramels.

3. Drink the usual amount of water which is best for health, about six glasses of liquid. The diet to which you refer considers eight ten ounce glasses daily essential because it is a very rapid reducing diet, enabling the person to lose many pounds in just a few days. Since so much fat is being burned up so rapidly, the water is necessary to flush away the waste products.

Q. I am turning my question box this week over to my younger readers. The first question comes from one in Pakistan. She asks, "I am 14 years old and five feet tall. My bust measures 31½ inches, waist 26 inches and hips 34 inches. Please tell me what is wrong and how I can improve."

A. There is nothing wrong that a year or so will not make right. For a perfect figure you should gain a couple of inches in the bust and lose a couple from the waist. You will just naturally slim down through the waist and develop more curve at the bust during the next couple of years. This goes for all of you who are in your early teens. However, if you want to help nature along do some waist slimming and chest developing exercises.

Q. I would like to know if it is abnormal for a girl 16 to have a bust which measures 40 inches. Some of my friends say I will get breast cancer. Is that true? Worried Sixteen

A. The size of the bust has absolutely nothing to do with cancer. Stop worrying. You certainly have sunshiny friends! If you have any enlargement such as a mass or lump in your breast you should, of course, see your doctor immediately.

Opening lead — king of clubs.

Let's assume you're in four spades and West leads the K-A and another club. Of course you ruff, but the outlook is dim because you are likely to lose two diamonds tricks and go down one.

However, since you come from sturdy stock, you concoct a scheme that might end in your making the contract. In line with this you draw two gounds of trumps, cash the A-K of hearts and ruff a heart.

Then you cash the ace of diamonds, everyone following low, and exit with a diamond. As it happens, West wins with the queen and must lead a heart or a club, so you wind up making the contract when you ruff the return in dummy and shed the other diamond loser from your hand.

Note that West can defeat you by dropping his queen of diamonds on the ace, for in that case you would simply have to lose two diamond tricks. Actually, West should spot the handwriting on the wall and make this play; he has no hcance of stopping you unless his parnter has the K-10 of diamonds.

But note further that you would pretty surely make the contract by approaching the play somewhat differently, that is, without so obviously telegraphing your intentions.

Suppose you had led a trump to dummy at trick four and played a diamond to the ace at trick five. In that case West would have to be exceptionally bright to drop the queen on the ace. If he failed to he would eventually get caught in the ruff-discard situation already described.

As a matter of fact, if West proved to be that smart, you should consider the advisability of not playing against him any more. You would be bucking your head against a stone wall.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is every time I ask my mother for permission to do something or go somewhere she says, "I can't give you permission until we find out how your father feels about it."

The problem is my father is hardly ever home, and when he is I have to wait until he is in a good mood to even bring up the question, and by that time it's too late.

Don't you think my mother should be able to give me permission to do things without my father's okay? Most of the time when I ask my father he says, "Whatever your mother says is all right with me."
SIGN ME . . NO PERMISSION

DEAR NO: How old are you? Permission for what? To ride your bike in the street or to bum thru Europe with a pal for two months? You will have to fill me in on a few details before I can give you a sensible answer.

DEAR ABBY: I was married less than a year to a fine young man who had a very Slavic sounding name. He died tragically. Now my mother wants me to take whatever legal steps are necessary so that I may use my maiden name again. My maiden name is very phonetic and very, very Anglo-Saxon.)

I can't seem to bring myself to do this, and I don't know why. Certainly not out of regard for my inlaws for they treated me shamefully after the accident that killed my husband, implying had he not married me he would be alive today. (Or worse.)

Sometimes I think I would take back my maiden name if my mother hadn't put so much pressure on me. I would hate to think getting a promotion or impressing an eligible man favorably would depend upon my name. I would appreciate your opinion.
MISS WASP (NIK)

DEAR MISS WASP (NIK): Granted, a "very, very Anglo-Saxon" sounding name can be an asset and a name that's typically Slavic can be a handicap when dealing with bigots. But do what your heart tell you to do. You sound to me like a young woman with good sense.

2. Sour balls or lemon drops have about 15 calories each. Forget the caramels.

3. Drink the usual amount of water which is best for health, about six glasses of liquid. The diet to which you refer considers eight ten ounce glasses daily essential because it is a very rapid reducing diet, enabling the person to lose many pounds in just a few days. Since so much fat is being burned up so rapidly, the water is necessary to flush away the waste products.

Q. I am turning my question box this week over to my younger readers. The first question comes from one in Pakistan. She asks, "I am 14 years old and five feet tall. My bust measures 31½ inches, waist 26 inches and hips 34 inches. Please tell me what is wrong and how I can improve."

A. There is nothing wrong that a year or so will not make right. For a perfect figure you should gain a couple of inches in the bust and lose a couple from the waist. You will just naturally slim down through the waist and develop more curve at the bust during the next couple of years. This goes for all of you who are in your early teens. However, if you want to help nature along do some waist slimming and chest developing exercises.

Q. I would like to know if it is abnormal for a girl 16 to have a bust which measures 40 inches. Some of my friends say I will get breast cancer. Is that true? Worried Sixteen

A. The size of the bust has absolutely nothing to do with cancer. Stop worrying. You certainly have sunshiny friends! If you have any enlargement such as a mass or lump in your breast you should, of course, see your doctor immediately.

Opening lead — king of clubs.

Let's assume you're in four spades and West leads the K-A and another club. Of course you ruff, but the outlook is dim because you are likely to lose two diamonds tricks and go down one.

However, since you come from sturdy stock, you concoct a scheme that might end in your making the contract. In line with this you draw two gounds of trumps, cash the A-K of hearts and ruff a heart.

Then you cash the ace of diamonds, everyone following low, and exit with a diamond. As it happens, West wins with the queen and must lead a heart or a club, so you wind up making the contract when you ruff the return in dummy and shed the other diamond loser from your hand.

Note that West can defeat you by dropping his queen of diamonds on the ace, for in that case you would simply have to lose two diamond tricks. Actually, West should spot the handwriting on the wall and make this play; he has no hcance of stopping you unless his parnter has the K-10 of diamonds.

But note further that you would pretty surely make the contract by approaching the play somewhat differently, that is, without so obviously telegraphing your intentions.

Suppose you had led a trump to dummy at trick four and played a diamond to the ace at trick five. In that case West would have to be exceptionally bright to drop the queen on the ace. If he failed to he would eventually get caught in the ruff-discard situation already described.

As a matter of fact, if West proved to be that smart, you should consider the advisability of not playing against him any more. You would be bucking your head against a stone wall.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is every time I ask my mother for permission to do something or go somewhere she says, "I can't give you permission until we find out how your father feels about it."

The problem is my father is hardly ever home, and when he is I have to wait until he is in a good mood to even bring up the question, and by that time it's too late.

Don't you think my mother should be able to give me permission to do things without my father's okay? Most of the time when I ask my father he says, "Whatever your mother says is all right with me."
SIGN ME . . NO PERMISSION

DEAR NO: How old are you? Permission for what? To ride your bike in the street or to bum thru Europe with a pal for two months? You will have to fill me in on a few details before I can give you a sensible answer.

DEAR ABBY: I was married less than a year to a fine young man who had a very Slavic sounding name. He died tragically. Now my mother wants me to take whatever legal steps are necessary so that I may use my maiden name again. My maiden name is very phonetic and very, very Anglo-Saxon.)

I can't seem to bring myself to do this, and I don't know why. Certainly not out of regard for my inlaws for they treated me shamefully after the accident that killed my husband, implying had he not married me he would be alive today. (Or worse.)

Sometimes I think I would take back my maiden name if my mother hadn't put so much pressure on me. I would hate to think getting a promotion or impressing an eligible man favorably would depend upon my name. I would appreciate your opinion.
MISS WASP (NIK)

DEAR MISS WASP (NIK): Granted, a "very, very Anglo-Saxon" sounding name can be an asset and a name that's typically Slavic can be a handicap when dealing with bigots. But do what your heart tell you to do. You sound to me like a young woman with good sense.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write ot ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

U.S. Might Experience Negative Trade Balance

©The New York Times

Washington — Secretary of Commerce Maurice H. Stans warned Congress Tuesday that the United States may have a negative balance of trade this year for the first time in this century.

Stans attributed his forecast, which congressmen of both parties termed "frightening," to growing deficits in raw materials and "low technology" products that are brought into the country matched against static surpluses in agricultural products and high technology goods sent abroad.

"The U.S. over-all balance of trade in recent years has deteriorated from surpluses of $5-7 billion in the early 60's to $1-2 billion levels since 1967," he said. "In 1971 the trade surplus may disappear altogether for the first time since 1893."

'A Probability'

A chart incorporated into Stans's testimony noted that for 1971 there was the "probability of the first trade deficit since 1893." The chart estimated that the nation's trade surplus this year would be zero.

Federal statistics showed that during April and May the United States had a trade deficit, the first time in 20 years that imports had exceeded exports in two successive months. The June figures are expected to be made public Wednesday.

The balance of trade is not the same thing as the balance of payments, with which the United States has been running a deficit for years. The balance of payments is a much broader measure, including not only trade, but all payments to and receipts from foreigners, such as transfers of bank balances and other purely financial transactions.

Role Sought

Stans testified before the subcommittee on science, research and development of the House Committee on Science and Astronautics, which is holding hearings to explore what role the federal government should play in spurring increased research and development by American industry.

One of the main reasons that the United States has been able to maintain a favorable balance of trade in recent years, the subcommittee contends, is that the tremendous sums spent on research and development has brought about the technological breakthroughs that have made American industry preeminent in such high technology goods as computers.

The United States now has a trade surplus of about $10-billion a year in such high technology goods, which is offset by substantial deficits in raw materials and such low technology goods as cheap textles and electrical products.

Sharp Cutbacks

Sharp cutbacks in recent years in both public and private support for basic and applied research have led some if not most American scientific and business leaders to forecast that foreign competition in high technology products will stiffen and that the nation's foreign trade problems will worsen in future years.

These predictions were echoed by testimony of the subcommittee's other witnesses Tuesday.

Dr. John R. Pierce, an executive of Bell Telephone laboratories and former member of the President's Science Advisory Committee, who throughout the last decade has sought to call attention to the nation's impending technological troubles, said:

"For more than a quarter of a century we have taken technological preeminence and our industrial strength for granted, as if no action, domestic or foreign, could threaten them," he said. "Now they are threatened, and so is our power to do the things that would make our world better."

What To Do?

The question before the subcommittee, as several of its members repeatedly pointed out, is what to do about the problem?

Stans offered four "program options" that included a wide variety of moves that the federal government might make to enhance technological development. They included tax incentives to spur increased private investment into research and development, programs aimed at encouraging invention and innovation, concentrating research and development efforts in specific technological areas that appear ripe for development, and others.

"But we have not yet progressed well enough within the administration to find out where we should go," Stans said.

'Modernizing'

One move being studied by the Commerce and Justice Departments, he said, was the "modernizing" of the anti-trust laws to permit "joint ventures and joint research." American companies have complained that anti-trust laws, to which foreign firms are not subject, may put them at a competitive disadvantage since they cannot pool their efforts as can companies in other countries. Some anti-trust authorities have questioned the value of dropping antitrust restrictions.

Rep. John W. Davis, D-Ga., the subcommittee chairman, noted after the hearing that the testimony showed "that winter is coming" for both American technology and American foreign trade.

"This is a trend, however, undramatic, that is frightening," Davis said. "Unless we reverse this slide, the nation is going to be in serious economic trouble."

Huey Newton Claims He Blacked-Out At Time Of Shooting

Oakland, Calif. (UPI' — Black Panther Party co-founder Huey Newton testified Tuesay he blacked-out at the time he is accused of shooting an Oakland policeman and remembers nothing.

Newton, 29, is charged with manslaughter in the fatal shooting of officer John Frey on Oct. 28, 1967 during a Panther-police shootout.

He has convicted of voluntary manslaughter in an earlier trial but an apellate court overturned the verdict and ordered a new trial.

Defense attorney Charles Garry at one point in Tuesday's trial introduced an article from the Black Panther Party newspaper to show the party's less militant stance.

The article said the Black Panther Party was dedicated to serving the black community.

Judge Harold Hove stopped Garry's questioning about the party when he said the Black Panther Party and its philosophy were not on trial.

In other questioning, Garry asked Newton if he thought all policemen were "gestapos."

"That would be against my dialectical way of doing things," Newton answered.

Newton denied he was carrying a gun the day of the shooting and denied the prosecutions contention there was marijuana in his car when it was stopped by Frey and his partner.

He said he was "crystal clear" about events prior to the shooting but blacked out after eing shot in the stomach.

He said the last thing he remembered was hearing a "volley of shots and noise" and didn't regain consciousness until he found himself in a local hospital and demanded treatment for stomach wounds.

Scott Supports War Powers Move

©The New York Times

Washington — Sen. Hugh Scott, the Senate minority leader, threw his support Tuesday behind proposals to place legislative restrictions on the war making powers of the presidency.

The Senate Republican leader thus broke with the Nixon administration, which has opposed any war powers legislation on the ground that it would interfere with the president's flexibility in conducting foreign policy. Rep. Gerald R. Ford, the House Republican leader, earlier this month endorsed the general concept of the war powers legislation being advanced in the Senate.

In explaining at a Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing how he had "come down a long road to the conclusion" that Congress must reassert its war powers, Scott appeared to criticize practices in the Nixon administration as well as previous administrations. Without congressional action, he said, ('I do not see how to stop the merry-go-round situation" in which the executive branch "maintains as much secrecy as possible to the point of suffocation and isolation."

Bill Likely

The time has come," he said, "when Congress will not be denied the right to participate, in accordance with the Constituton, in the whole enormous business of how wars are begun."

Scott had represented a potential point of opposition to war powers legislation within the Senate Foreign Relations Commtitee. With his support it now seems likely that the committee will report out a bill after the August congressional recess with the objective not so much of pushing for immediate enactment but of exposing the lgislation to examination by the legal and academic community as well as the executive branch. The hope of Sen. J. W. Fulbright, the committee chairman, is that the Senate may then proceed to consider the legislation early next year.

What is likely to emerge from the committee is a collage of various proposals offered by Senators Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., Robert Taft Jr., R-Ohio, and John Stennis, D-Miss.

In various ways, their proposals would authorize the president to undertake military actions in certain emergency situations but specify that the president could not continue hostilities beyond a certain period without obtaining congressional approval.

Meanwhile, a Senate Judiciary subcommittee headed by Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., opened hearings on legislation designed to curb the power of the executive branch to withhold information from Congress.

Before the subcommittee is a Fulbright bill that would require executive branch employes to appear before congressional committees when summoned, even if they subsequently decline to disclose information on the basis of a contention of executive privilege approved by th president.

Policy Shielded

Fulbright, the opening witness, complained that the Nixon administration was conducting foreign policy through a White House "super bureau" that is "shielded from Congress and the American people behind a barricade of executive privilege."

Contrary to the spirit of the Constitution, he said, there has grown up within the White House a whole new foreign policy bureau — now headed by Dr. Henry J. Kissinger, the President's national security adviser — that has been "vested with the most crucial decision-making power on matter of war and peace but responsible to neither the Congress nor the people."

"The result," he contended, "is that the people's representatives in Congress are denied direct access not only to the President himself but to the individual who is the President's chief foreign policy adviser, the principal architect of his war policy in Indochina and the emissary for his forthcoming trip to China."

"The China visit," he said, "provides a striking example of the way in which the new foreign policy apparatus in the White House circumvents the Congress."

It would have been "useful and appropriate," he argued, for Kissinger to have consulted in advance with the Foreign Relations Committee on China policy and to report now to the committee on his trip to Peking. Except for a few informal dinner meetings arranged through the committee staff, Kissinger, on orders from the White House, has refused on grounds of executive privilege to meet with the Foreign Relations Committee.

Trio Arrested After Raid On Ragan House

Ragan (AP) — Law enforcement officers from Phelps and Harlan counties and the State Patrol raided a house in this community of 60 residents Tuesday and arrested three men, whom Harlan County Attorney Robert McKelvie said would be charged with the manufacture of a controlled substance.

McKelvie said the three were identified as Marlin Kammann, Robert Bowles and Dennis Joslin, formerly of Holdrege.

He said the three — suspected of handling marijuana — would be charged under the new law LB326, Subsections 1 and 2.

The arrests were the outgrowth of an investigation that began a month ago. Phelps County Attorney Clark Noble said the investigation stemmed from the arrest of a young woman charged with possession of marijuana with intent to sell it.

U.N. Ambassador Plans To Inspect SAC Facilities

Omaha (AP) — Briefings and an inspection trip of the Strategic Air Command Headquarters is scheduled Wednesday for George H. Bush, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

Bush will meet with Lt. Gen. Glen W. Martin, SAC vice commander-in-chief, as Gen. Bruce K. Holloway, commander-in-chief, will be away.

Accompanying the ambassador will be Lt. Gen. Austin J. Russell, Air Force assistant vice chief of staff.

WE, Union Reach Agreement On Three-Year Labor Pact

Omaha (AP) — The Omaha works of Western Electric announced Tuesday it has reached agreement with Local 1974 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers on a new three-year labor contract.

Dick Damrow, associate director of public affairs for Western Electric in Omaha, said the three-year contract calls for an increase of about 31% in wages and fringe benefits for the 5,500 employes represented by the union.

The new agreement calls for an increase of more than 16% in wages and fringes the first year Damrow said. Also included, he said, are cost of living increases in the last two years of the contract which will be tied to the federal government's National Consumer Price Index.

Additional improvement in fringe benefits will also be made in the second and third years.

The general wage increases for Omaha works employes, Damrow said, will range from 37 cents per hour to 73 cents per hour based on the employe's trade.

The contract expired May 10 and union and company negotiators have been working on the contract for some four months.

U.S. Might Experience Negative Trade Balance

©The New York Times

Washington — Secretary of Commerce Maurice H. Stans warned Congress Tuesday that the United States may have a negative balance of trade this year for the first time in this century.

Stans attributed his forecast, which congressmen of both parties termed "frightening," to growing deficits in raw materials and "low technology" products that are brought into the country matched against static surpluses in agricultural products and high technology goods sent abroad.

"The U.S. over-all balance of trade in recent years has deteriorated from surpluses of $5-7 billion in the early 60's to $1-2 billion levels since 1967," he said. "In 1971 the trade surplus may disappear altogether for the first time since 1893."

'A Probability'

A chart incorporated into Stans's testimony noted that for 1971 there was the "probability of the first trade deficit since 1893." The chart estimated that the nation's trade surplus this year would be zero.

Federal statistics showed that during April and May the United States had a trade deficit, the first time in 20 years that imports had exceeded exports in two successive months. The June figures are expected to be made public Wednesday.

The balance of trade is not the same thing as the balance of payments, with which the United States has been running a deficit for years. The balance of payments is a much broader measure, including not only trade, but all payments to and receipts from foreigners, such as transfers of bank balances and other purely financial transactions.

Role Sought

Stans testified before the subcommittee on science, research and development of the House Committee on Science and Astronautics, which is holding hearings to explore what role the federal government should play in spurring increased research and development by American industry.

One of the main reasons that the United States has been able to maintain a favorable balance of trade in recent years, the subcommittee contends, is that the tremendous sums spent on research and development has brought about the technological breakthroughs that have made American industry preeminent in such high technology goods as computers.

The United States now has a trade surplus of about $10-billion a year in such high technology goods, which is offset by substantial deficits in raw materials and such low technology goods as cheap textles and electrical products.

Sharp Cutbacks

Sharp cutbacks in recent years in both public and private support for basic and applied research have led some if not most American scientific and business leaders to forecast that foreign competition in high technology products will stiffen and that the nation's foreign trade problems will worsen in future years.

These predictions were echoed by testimony of the subcommittee's other witnesses Tuesday.

Dr. John R. Pierce, an executive of Bell Telephone laboratories and former member of the President's Science Advisory Committee, who throughout the last decade has sought to call attention to the nation's impending technological troubles, said:

"For more than a quarter of a century we have taken technological preeminence and our industrial strength for granted, as if no action, domestic or foreign, could threaten them," he said. "Now they are threatened, and so is our power to do the things that would make our world better."

What To Do?

The question before the subcommittee, as several of its members repeatedly pointed out, is what to do about the problem?

Stans offered four "program options" that included a wide variety of moves that the federal government might make to enhance technological development. They included tax incentives to spur increased private investment into research and development, programs aimed at encouraging invention and innovation, concentrating research and development efforts in specific technological areas that appear ripe for development, and others.

"But we have not yet progressed well enough within the administration to find out where we should go," Stans said.

'Modernizing'

One move being studied by the Commerce and Justice Departments, he said, was the "modernizing" of the anti-trust laws to permit "joint ventures and joint research." American companies have complained that anti-trust laws, to which foreign firms are not subject, may put them at a competitive disadvantage since they cannot pool their efforts as can companies in other countries. Some anti-trust authorities have questioned the value of dropping antitrust restrictions.

Rep. John W. Davis, D-Ga., the subcommittee chairman, noted after the hearing that the testimony showed "that winter is coming" for both American technology and American foreign trade.

"This is a trend, however, undramatic, that is frightening," Davis said. "Unless we reverse this slide, the nation is going to be in serious economic trouble."

Huey Newton Claims He Blacked-Out At Time Of Shooting

Oakland, Calif. (UPI) — Black Panther Party co-founder Huey Newton testified Tuesay he blacked-out at the time he is accused of shooting an Oakland policeman and remembers nothing.

Newton, 29, is charged with manslaughter in the fatal shooting of officer John Frey on Oct. 28, 1967 during a Panther-police shootout.

He has convicted of voluntary manslaughter in an earlier trial but an apellate court overturned the verdict and ordered a new trial.

Defense attorney Charles Garry at one point in Tuesday's trial introduced an article from the Black Panther Party newspaper to show the party's less militant stance.

The article said the Black Panther Party was dedicated to serving the black community.

Judge Harold Hove stopped Garry's questioning about the party when he said the Black Panther Party and its philosophy were not on trial.

In other questioning, Garry asked Newton if he thought all policemen were "gestapos."

"That would be against my dialectical way of doing things," Newton answered.

Newton denied he was carrying a gun the day of the shooting and denied the prosecutions contention there was marijuana in his car when it was stopped by Frey and his partner.

He said he was "crystal clear" about events prior to the shooting but blacked out after eing shot in the stomach.

He said the last thing he remembered was hearing a "volley of shots and noise" and didn't regain consciousness until he found himself in a local hospital and demanded treatment for stomach wounds.

Scott Supports War Powers Move

©The New York Times

Washington — Sen. Hugh Scott, the Senate minority leader, threw his support Tuesday behind proposals to place legislative restrictions on the war making powers of the presidency.

The Senate Republican leader thus broke with the Nixon administration, which has opposed any war powers legislation on the ground that it would interfere with the president's flexibility in conducting foreign policy. Rep. Gerald R. Ford, the House Republican leader, earlier this month endorsed the general concept of the war powers legislation being advanced in the Senate.

In explaining at a Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing how he had "come down a long road to the conclusion" that Congress must reassert its war powers, Scott appeared to criticize practices in the Nixon administration as well as previous administrations. Without congressional action, he said, ('I do not see how to stop the merry-go-round situation" in which the executive branch "maintains as much secrecy as possible to the point of suffocation and isolation."

Bill Likely

The time has come," he said, "when Congress will not be denied the right to participate, in accordance with the Constituton, in the whole enormous business of how wars are begun."

Scott had represented a potential point of opposition to war powers legislation within the Senate Foreign Relations Commtitee. With his support it now seems likely that the committee will report out a bill after the August congressional recess with the objective not so much of pushing for immediate enactment but of exposing the Igislation to examination by the legal and academic community as well as the executive branch. The hope of Sen. J. W. Fulbright, the committee chairman, is that the Senate may then proceed to consider the legislation early next year.

What is likely to emerge from the committee is a collage of various proposals offered by Senators Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., Robert Taft Jr., R-Ohio, and John Stennis, D-Miss.

In various ways, their proposals would authorize the president to undertake military actions in certain emergency situations but specify that the president could not continue hostilities beyond a certain period without obtaining congressional approval.

Meanwhile, a Senate Judiciary subcommittee headed by Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., opened hearings on legislation designed to curb the power of the executive branch to withhold information from Congress.

Before the subcommittee is a Fulbright bill that would require executive branch employes to appear before congressional committees when summoned, even if they subsequently decline to disclose information on the basis of a contention of executive privilege approved by th president.

Policy Shielded

Fulbright, the opening witness, complained that the Nixon administration was conducting foreign policy through a White House "super bureau" that is "shielded from Congress and the American people behind a barricade of executive privilege."

Contrary to the spirit of the Constitution, he said, there has grown up within the White House a whole new foreign policy bureau — now headed by Dr. Henry J. Kissinger, the President's national security adviser — that has been "vested with the most crucial decision-making power on matter of war and peace but responsible to neither the Congress nor the people."

"The result," he contended, "is that the people's representatives in Congress are denied direct access not only to the President himself but to the individual who is the President's chief foreign policy adviser, the principal architect of his war policy in Indochina and the emissary for his forthcoming trip to China."

"The China visit," he said, "provides a striking example of the way in which the new foreign policy apparatus in the White House circumvents the Congress."

It would have been "useful and appropriate," he argued, for Kissinger to have consulted in advance with the Foreign Relations Committee on China policy and to report now to the committee on his trip to Peking. Except for a few informal dinner meetings arranged through the committee staff, Kissinger, on orders from the White House, has refused on grounds of executive privilege to meet with the Foreign Relations Committee.

Trio Arrested After Raid On Ragan House

Ragan (AP) — Law enforcement officers from Phelps and Harlan counties and the State Patrol raided a house in this community of 60 residents Tuesday and arrested three men, whom Harlan County Attorney Robert McKelvie said would be charged with the manufacture of a controlled substance.

McKelvie said the three were identified as Marlin Kammann, Robert Bowles and Dennis Joslin, formerly of Holdrege.

He said the three — suspected of handling marijuana — would be charged under the new law LB326, Subsections 1 and 2.

The arrests were the outgrowth of an investigation that began a month ago. Phelps County Attorney Clark Noble said the investigation stemmed from the arrest of a young woman charged with possession of marijuana with intent to sell it.

U.N. Ambassador Plans To Inspect SAC Facilities

Omaha (AP) — Briefings and an inspection trip of the Strategic Air Command Headquarters is scheduled Wednesday for George H. Bush, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

Bush will meet with Lt. Gen. Glen W. Martin, SAC vice commander-in-chief, as Gen. Bruce K. Holloway, commander-in-chief, will be away.

Accompanying the ambassador will be Lt. Gen. Austin J. Russell, Air Force assistant vice chief of staff.

Market Prices Sharply Lower

New York (AP) — Stock market prices moved sharply lower Tuesday in another dull session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 8.17 to 880.70.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange totaled only 11.56 million shares. Even so, it was higher than Monday's 9.94 million share turnover, which was the second slowest of the year.

Analysts said there was no particular reason for the market's slide. Most attributed the decline to an absence of buying interest, which could absorb what little selling pressure there was.

Many investors were still on the sidelines, where they have been for the past several sessions.

The market has been drifting for the past few weeks within the 870 to 910 level of the Dow.

Analysts pointed out that Tuesday's selloff fell well within that range and did not signal the start of any major downward thrust.

The New York Stock Exchange index of some 1,300 common stocks fell 0.52 to 54.13.

Of the 1,651 stocks traded on the Big Board, 1,052 declined, and 333 advanced. There were 15 new highs and 65 new lows.

Stocks were lower in all categories except for metals, steels, and oils, which were mixed.

The Associated Press 60-stock average fell 2.7 to 316.2, with industrials off 4.3 rails off 1.7, and utilities down 0.6.

Standard & Poor's 500 stock index closed at 97.78, off .89.

There were a total of 74 blocks of 10,000 shares or over traded on the New York Stock Exchange, compared with 58 on Monday.

EVERYBODY'S MONEY:

Unemployment Persists Amidst Continuing Inflation

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

MERRYLE RUKEYSER

Interference Reflected

The persistence of unemployment amidst continuing inflation at a modified pace reflects the adverse effects of political interference with the business of making and exchanging things.

It is facetious for the Administration to allude to its strategy as a "game" plan.

And it is mischievous for the "loyal opposition" in politics and in organized labor to exaggerate the degree of current economic amiadjustment. Such political and social intervention tends to reduce the speed of recovery of confidence after the earlier anti-inflationary restrictive policies.

It is certainly unscientific to ascribe the 6% unemployment exclusively to Mr. Nixon. The unemployment reflects many factors. These include winding down of the American combat participation in the Vietnamese War, reduction of U.S. spending on armaments and space, and the impact of steps earlier to cool off the overheated national economy.

Unions A Factor

The effort of George Meany, president, AFL-CIO and his associates, to acribe blame to the White House and corporate profiteers diverts attention from the impact of current trade union policies.

The current efforts of unions to use the fiat power bestowed to them by Congress to jack up hourly wage rates faster than an increase in productivity is not only inflationary, but is a deterrent to added employment.

After an economic letdown, the process of recovery in a competitive system depends on the ability of business venturers to see the prospects of making a profit through expanding operations, including adding persons to payrolls.

At present, however, the arbitrary marking up of labor costs discourages expanding job opportunities and makes it profitable to seek out new labor-saving techniques through substitution of mechanical power (electrically driven machines) for the sweat and groan of human labor.

The experience of the human race is that the willingness to buy things or to hire additional employes is motivated by indications that you will get your money's worth. Store move merchandise through markdowns, not through raising the price tags.

No Segment Free

While inflation is an irritant to both management and workers and adds to the difficulty of harmonious adjustments, no segment can be free of responsibility for compounding troubles instead of reducing barriers to free exchange of goods and services.

In addition to the short term domestic factors, other influences affect the market for human services. Internationally, the big change lies in the fact that lower wage countries including West Germany, Japan, and Southeast Asia have been emulating America sophisticated technology, and have eliminated American uniqueness in converting high labor rates into reasonable unit costs of production.

This has been reflected in a disappearance of the traditional American favorable balance of international trade in goods, as high costs tend to price certain products out of foreign markets.

Besides long term population growth and the increasing ratio of women among the gainfully employed requires economic expansion in order to provide a high level of employment. In addition, there has been in recent decades a shift in the work force from making things to the service trades.

Servants Increase

This transforation is in part reflected in a huge increase in the number of civil servants. Inflation, plus demands of organized civil servants for higher pay and more liberal pension benefits, has resulted in unbalanced budgets in school districts, counties and cities, with resultant layoffs.

It takes a degree of market judgment for the worker to understand what skills are in current demand. Changing technology has relatively reduced the salability of common, or unskilled, labor. And new methods in this computer age have altered the types of skills which are wanted. This situation calls for retraining of workers whose qualities have become obsolete from a marketable standpoint.

A complete inventory of the causes of unemployment would include survival of bias against some ethnic groups, and also perpetuation of the attitude that some categories of employment are unpopular.

There is for example, a shortage of persons willing to take employment in household work. Recently there has been some organized effort to improve not only the economic status of such workers but also their prestige. Would-be employers can help by making it clear to housekeepers and Mother's helpers that such work is dignified, important and socially useful.

(Mr. Rukeyser will be pleased to receive inquiries from readers concerning their financial problems. Letters with stamped, self addressed envelopes should be sent in care of this newspaper. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Others, to the extent time permits, will be handled by mail.)

Market Prices Sharply Lower

New York (AP) — Stock market prices moved sharply lower Tuesday in another dull session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 8.17 to 880.70.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange totaled only 11.56 million shares. Even so, it was higher than Monday's 9.94 million share turnover, which was the second slowest of the year.

Analysts said there was no particular reason for the market's slide. Most attributed the decline to an absence of buying interest, which could absorb what little selling pressure there was.

Many investors were still on the sidelines, where they have been for the past several sessions.

The market has been drifting for the past few weeks within the 870 to 910 level of the Dow.

Analysts pointed out that Tuesday's selloff fell well within that range and did not signal the start of any major downward thrust.

The New York Stock Exchange index of some 1,300 common stocks fell 0.52 to 54.13.

Of the 1,651 stocks traded on the Big Board, 1,052 declined, and 333 advanced. There were 15 new highs and 65 new lows.

Stocks were lower in all categories except for metals, steels, and oils, which were mixed.

The Associated Press 60-stock average fell 2.7 to 316.2, with industrials off 4.3 rails off 1.7, and utilities down 0.6.

Standard & Poor's 500 stock index closed at 97.78, off .89.

There were a total of 74 blocks of 10,000 shares or over traded on the New York Stock Exchange, compared with 58 on Monday.

EVERYBODY'S MONEY:

Unemployment Persists Amidst Continuing Inflation

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

MERRYLE RUKEYSER

Interference Reflected

The persistence of unemployment amidst continuing inflation at a modified pace reflects the adverse effects of political interference with the business of making and exchanging things.

It is facetious for the Administration to allude to its strategy as a "game" plan.

And it is mischievous for the "loyal opposition" in politics and in organized labor to exaggerate the degree of current economic maladjustment. Such political and social intervention tends to reduce the speed of recovery of confidence after the earlier anti-inflationary restrictive policies.

It is certainly unscientific to ascribe the 6% unemployment exclusively to Mr. Nixon. The unemployment reflects many factors. These include winding down of the American combat participation in the Vietnamese War, reduction of U.S. spending on armaments and space, and the impact of steps earlier to cool off the overheated national economy.

Unions A Factor

The effort of George Meany, president, AFL-CIO and his associates, to acribe blame to the White House and corporate profiteers diverts attention from the impact of current trade union policies.

The current efforts of unions to use the fiat power bestowed to them by Congress to jack up hourly wage rates faster than an increase in productivity is not only inflationary, but is a deterrent to added employment.

After an economic letdown, the process of recovery in a competitive system depends on the ability of business venturers to see the prospects of making a profit through expanding operations, including adding persons to payrolls.

At present, however, the arbitrary marking up of labor costs discourages expanding job opportunities and makes it profitable to seek out new labor-saving techniques through substitution of mechanical power (electrically driven machines) for the sweat and groan of human labor.

The experience of the human race is that the willingness to buy things or to hire additional employes is motivated by indications that you will get your money's worth. Store move merchandise through markdowns, not through raising the price tags.

No Segment Free

While inflation is an irritant to both management and workers and adds to the difficulty of harmonious adjustments; no segment can be free of responsibility for compounding troubles instead of reducing barriers to free exchange of goods and services.

In addition to the short term domestic factors, other influences affect the market for human services. Internationally, the big change lies in the fact that lower wage countries including West Germany, Japan, and Southeast Asia have been emulating America sophisticated technology, and have eliminated American uniqueness in converting high labor rates into reasonable unit costs of production.

This has been reflected in a disappearance of the traditional American favorable balance of international trade in goods, as high costs tend to price certain products out of foreign markets.

Besides long term population growth and the increasing ratio of women among the gainfully employed requires economic expansion in order to provide a high level of employment. In addition, there has been in recent decades a shift in the work force from making things to the service trades.

Servants Increase

This transforation is in part reflected in a huge increase in the number of civil servants. Inflation, plus demands of organized civil servants for higher pay and more liberal pension benefits, has resulted in unbalanced budgets in school districts, counties and cities, with resultant layoffs.

It takes a degree of market judgment for the worker to understand what skills are in current demand. Changing technology has relatively reduced the salability of common, or unskilled, labor. And new methods in this computer age have altered the types of skills which are wanted. This situation calls for retraining of workers whose qualities have become obsolete from a marketable standpoint.

A complete inventory of the causes of unemployment would include survival of bias against some ethnic groups, and also perpetuation of the attitude that some categories of employment are unpopular.

There is for example, a shortage of persons willing to take employment in household work. Recently there has been some organized effort to improve not only the economic status of such workers but also their prestige. Would-be employers can help by making it clear to housekeepers and Mother's helpers that such work is dignified, important and socially useful.

(Mr. Rukeyser will be pleased to receive inquiries from readers concerning their financial problems. Letters with stamped, self addressed envelopes should be sent in care of this newspaper. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Others, to the extent time permits, will be handled by mail.)

Vietnamese Central Highland Relocations May Start Again

©The New York Times

Dalat, South Vietnam — Vietnamese province chiefs and military authorities in the central highlands are planning to resume a controversial program of transferring tens of thousands of primitive hill tribesmen out of Communist-controlled areas.

Last year 50,000 Montagnard tribesmen were "relocated," in many cases against their will, before American advisers forced a suspension, terming the practice counterproductive because it alienates the people usually without improving their lot.

But now, according to high American advisory sources, the uprootings seem about to begin again, although under closer supervision from Saigon, and with assurances in most cases that the people agree to be moved.

Plans Unapproved

American advisers here say that plans drafted in one province — Quangduc, near the Cambodian border — could involve 30,000 tribesmen. The plans have not been submitted to Saigon for approval.

According to Norman P. Firnstahl, deputy chief of the United States government agency in charge of aid to war victims, a proposal by the 6000 Montagnards was recently turned down by a delegation from Saigon on the ground of insufficient planning.

There are also plans to move 4,500 people in Kontum province and 10,000 to 15,000 in Ninhthuan, on the coast east of here, but these plans have also not yet been submitted for approval, Firnstahl said.

The Americans disapprove. When the chief of Tuyenduc province asked them to urge Saigon to approve his plan to move Montagnards from around Dalat, they refused.

The senior U.S. official in the highlands, John Paul Vann, said recently that the problems caused by relocation — disorientation, death from sickness or weakness, and sometimes starvation — far outweighed any gain from increased security.

Security Sought

The province chiefs are all under pressure from the government to improve security by next summer when they cannot send in more troops. They prefer to move villagers to a place that is already secure.

The relocations suspended earlier this year were carried out by the chiefs of the highlands military region wtihout clearance from the government. In this election year, President Nguyen Van Thieu is anxious for votes from the country's million Montagnards, so, for the moment, the provincial authorities are not getting their way.

"We have been receiving requests from this and other provinces to move the Montagnard people, but before it can be allowed there must be clear justification for it and a detailed plan to move them," Huynh Thanh Hung, assistant minister of social welfare, told a recent meeting of provincial authorities here in Dalat.

But within 30 days, according to Hung, more than a thousand tribesmen — Americans say it is 2,000 to 4,000, but nobody knows — who fled Cambodia last year will be transferred from Buprang in Quangduc province to abandoned lands in underpopulated Phuoclong province, to the south. According to the government, they have asked to go.

Police Jail Man After Woman's Purse Snatched

A 24-year-old man was jailed Tuesday night in connecton with a purse-snatching incident at 21st and O, according to police reports.

Police said, "Clara Robertson, 65, of 255 N. 25th St. reported she was standing on the southwest corner of 21st and O when a man ran up and grabbed her purse out of her shopping cart and then ran south on 21st."

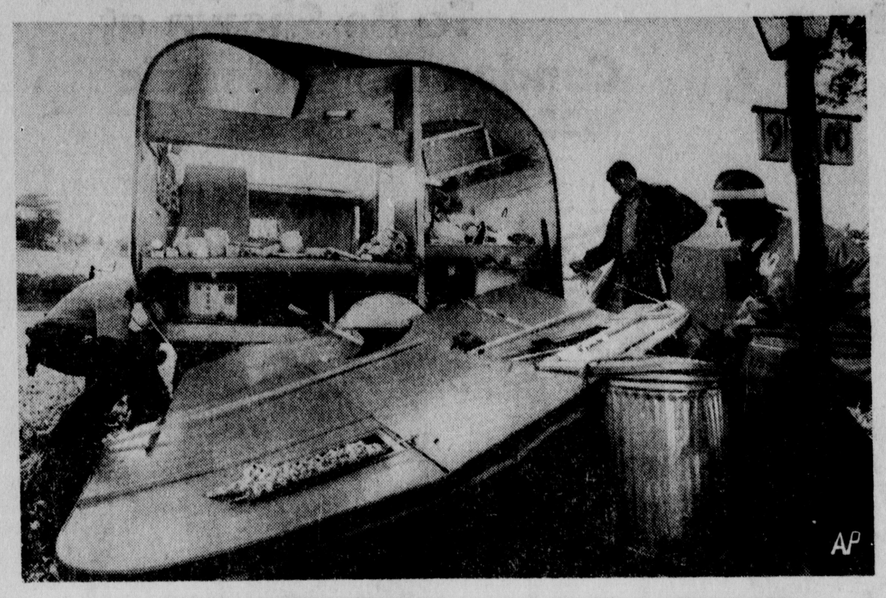

Police said, "The arrested man was found hiding in a boat behind 2045 O." He reportedly still had some items from the purse in his possession.

Jensen Raps Government Bills On Aged

The director of the Nebraska Commission on Aging told the chairman of the White House Conference on Aging and a panel of regional federal officials that legislation currently proposed by the Nixon administration could significantly limit the opportunities for older and middle-aged workers to find jobs or receive promotions in federal civil service.

Speaking to a meeting of the Federal Regional Council in Kansas City, Ron Jensen said that the combined effect of seven bills currently before Congress would violate the spirit of the federal age discrimination in employment act, which prohibits the use of age qualifications to limit a worker's hiring, firing and conditions of employment.

Jensen told the panel that retirement should be a flexible process which allows for biological as well as chronological age. He suggested that it should be possible for an individual to taper off from fulltime professional employment through parttime work or beginning a second career.

EARLY EXPLOSION DAMAGES TRAILER

Construction worker Kenneth Theel, 39, of Brandon, S.D., remains in critical condition in St. Mary's Hospital in Rochester, Minn., with 1st, 2nd and 3rd-degree burns over 40% of his body after an explosion that blew the sides out of his camper-trailer near Marion, Minn. He reportedly was lighting a liquid propane gas stove when the explosion occurred.

House OKs Funds For HEW, Labor

©The New York Times

Washington — The House passed Tuesday night by a vote of 372 to 25 an appropriations bill which would give the Department of Health, Education and Welfare about $447 million more than President Nixon's proposed budget for the 1972 fiscal year.

Passage came after 8 p.m., following the introduction of eight amendments only two of which were passed.

The largest of the two successful amendments was presented by Rep. Robert N. Giamo, D-Conn., to add $82 million to federal rehabilitation programs. This amendment, which would increase federal support for vocational rehabilitation programs, was supported by over 20 groups concerned with problems of the handicapped. Its purpose is to provide additional rehabilitation services and facilities.

The largest single appropriation in the bill was more than $11.4 billion for grants to states for public assistance under the social and rehabilitation service.

The other amendment passed by the House was a $14 million increase asked by Rep. Paul G. Rogers, D-Fla., to provide additional funds for Public Health Service hospitals and clinics. The Nixon administration has sought to close the eight remaining public health service hospitals and a larger number of clinics. Rogers said he was introducing his amendment to forstall any such move.

An amendment package that would have added about $200 million primarily to the funds for health research and related uses was defeated.

The appropriation bill passed tonight is the largest under consideration by the House for anything other than defense. It would provide about $20.4 billion for the Departments of Labor, Health Education and Welfare and related agencies. Of this, about $18.9 billion would go for most of the major programs of HEW. Labor would get about $1.3 billion.

The bill must now go to the Senate for consideration. Following that it is expected that a House-Senate conference will work out a final version to be sent to the President.

Almost all of the debate on the bill was concerned with the funding of provisions for health care including rehabilitation and health related research.

In its report, the House subcommittee which drafted the bill was sharply critical of the Nixon administration for failure to request more money for health in its proposed budget. The criticism was particularly sharp concerning the proposed budget for the national institutes of health, the federal government's main agency for the conduct and support of biomedical research.

Black Militant Angela Davis Enters A Plea Of Innocent

San Rafael, Calif. (AP) — Black militant Angela Davis formally pleaded innocent Tuesday to murder, kidnap and conspiracy charges. The judge set her trial to begin in 60 days.

"I plead not guilty," said Miss Davis, her arms folded as she stood before Superior Court Judge Richard E. Arnason.

Just before the plea, the judge handed Miss Davis a legal victory by granting her permission to have the powers of a defense attorney in her own trial.

Arnason said this was rarely granted but he felt "the cause of justice will be served."

He said the court may revoke the privilege if it appears she abuses it.

The judge denied defense requests to dismiss a grand jury indictment against her on grounds there was damaging pretrial publicity and that the grand jury was prejudiced. However, he set a pretrial hearing next Monday allowing the defense a chance to present what it says is evidence that judges who selected the 19-man county grand jury did not do so impersonally.

Arnason said defense attorneys may interview the selector judges at this hearing.

Miss Davis, 27, is charged in connection with the Aug. 7 Marin County courthouse gunbattle in which a judge and three others were slain. She is not accused of being present, but of furnishing guns used in an abortive escape attempt and helping plot the crime.

Eight Infants Are Injured

Hamm, Germany (AP) —An unknown assailant, apparently using karate blows, fractured the skulls of four infants and broke the arms of four others in the maternity ward of the Hamm Hospital, police reported Tuesday.

A hospital spokesman said the injuries, some of them discovered about 12 hours after the assault, were not critical, but that one of the infaants may be left with irrepairable damage.

Police said the attack must have come late Saturday night when the nurse in charge of the ward was called away on a premature birth. When the next nurse took over Sunday, she noticed the first of the injured babies that were between four hours and 10 days old.

During the course of the day, the other injuries were discovered. A spokesman for the district attorney in nearby Dortmund said this was not unusual because of the continuous crying in most maternity wards. He added the assailant left no open wounds on his victims.

The spokesman said there was no immediate clue as to the assailant.

800,000 Dogs Stray

Mexico City (AP) — About 60 cases of rabies are reported each month in this city of eight million, where one-quarter of the 800,000 dogs are strays, officials said.

Roller Skating Support Urged

The Lincoln Chamber of Commerce has urged Lincoln residents to turn out and support the event which has made Lincoln the roller skating capital of North America.

Harry Seward, chamber president, said the Roller Skating Rink Operators Association (RSROA), sponsors of the national roller skating championship, expect more than 1,300 skaters and nearly 5,000 persons in the city during the July 26-August 5 contest.

Lao Funds Stolen

Bangkok (UPI) — Police said a man on a motorcycle escaped with a box containing $60,000 in Laotian government funds he took from in front of the customs building at Bangkok's Don Muang airport. The money was en route to a bank in Switzerland, they said.

Managements Of 2 GM Plants Are Combined

Cincinnati (AP) — General Motors Corp. announced Tuesday it had combined the managements of both the Chevrolet and Fisher Body assembly plants in suburban Norwood and the United Auto Workers demanded a renegotiation of contracts for 4,900 workers.

In an announcement by James Roache, GM president, Sidney Roache, was named manager of the combined plants which will be called General Motors Assembly Division (GMAD).

The adjacent plants produce Pontiac Firebirds and Chevrolet Camaros.

Richard Minton, president of Local 674 UAW said existing union contracts were negotiated separately with Chevrolet and with Fisher Body. He said his union had notified the new management that a new contract was sought.

Man Charged With Embezzlement, Making False Report Of Robbery

Burton LeBow, 42, of 5630 Walker Drive, was charged Tuesday in Lancaster County Court with embezzlement of funds from the Veteran's Thrift Store at 1745 O and with making a false report of an alleged armed robbery.

LeBow, who was employed as the store's manager, pleaded innocent to the misdemeanor charge of a false report and trial was set for Aug. 11.

Preliminary hearing on the felony charge of embezzlement against LeBow was also set for Aug. 11, and the defendant requested a court-appointed attorney.

Acting County Judge Raymond Calkins permitted LeBow to withdraw a plea guilty on the misdemeanor charge after the defendant stated he was under the impression that no embezzlement charge would be brought against him.

Calkins set appearance bonds at $2,500 on the felony charge and $100 on the misdemeanor

Vietnamese Central Highland Relocations May Start Again

©The New York Times

Dalat, South Vietnam — Vietnamese province chiefs and military authorities in the central highlands are planning to resume a controversial program of transferring tens of thousands of primitive hill tribesmen out of Communist-controlled areas.

Last year 50,000 Montagnard tribesmen were "relocated," in many cases against their will, before American advisers forced a suspension, terming the practice counterproductive because it alienates the people usually without improving their lot.

But now, according to high American advisory sources, the uprootings seem about to begin again, although under closer supervision from Saigon, and with assurances in most cases that the people agree to be moved.

Plans Unapproved

American advisers here say that plans drafted in one province — Quangduc, near the Cambodian border — could involve 30,000 tribesmen. The plans have not been submitted to Saigon for approval.

According to Norman P. Firnstahl, deputy chief of the United States government agency in charge of aid to war victims, a proposal by the 6000 Montagnards was recently turned down by a delegation from Saigon on the ground of insufficient planning.

There are also plans to move 4,500 people in Kontum province and 10,000 to 15,000 in Ninhthuan, on the coast east of here, but these plans have also not yet been submitted for approval, Firnstahl said.

The Americans disapprove. When the chief of Tuyenduc province asked them to urge Saigon to approve his plan to move Montagnards from around Dalat, they refused.

The senior U.S. official in the highlands, John Paul Vann, said recently that the problems caused by relocation — disorientation, death from sickness or weakness, and sometimes starvation — far outweighed any gain from increased security.

Security Sought

The province chiefs are all under pressure from the government to improve security by next summer when they cannot send in more troops. They prefer to move villagers to a place that is already secure.

The relocations suspended earlier this year were carried out by the chiefs of the highlands military region wtihout clearance from the government. In this election year, President Nguyen Van Thieu is anxious for votes from the country's million Montagnards, so, for the moment, the provincial authorities are not getting their way.

"We have been receiving requests from this and other provinces to move the Montagnard people, but before it can be allowed there must be clear justification for it and a detailed plan to move them," Huynh Thanh Hung, assistant minister of social welfare, told a recent meeting of provincial authorities here in Dalat.

But within 30 days, according to Hung, more than a thousand tribesmen — Americans say it is 2,000 to 4,000, but nobody knows — who fled Cambodia last year will be transferred from Buprang in Quangduc province to abandoned lands in underpopulated Phuoclong province, to the south. According to the government, they have asked to go.

Police Jail Man After Woman's Purse Snatched

A 24-year-old man was jailed Tuesday night in connecton with a purse-snatching incident at 21st and O, according to police reports.

Police said, "Clara Robertson, 65, of 255 N. 25th St. reported she was standing on the southwest corner of 21st and O when a man ran up and grabbed her purse out of her shopping cart and then ran south on 21st."

Police said, "The arrested man was found hiding in a boat behind 2045 O." He reportedly still had some items from the purse in his possession.

Jensen Raps Government Bills On Aged

The director of the Nebraska Commission on Aging told the chairman of the White House Conference on Aging and a panel of regional federal officials that legislation currently proposed by the Nixon administration could significantly limit the opportunities for older and middle-aged workers to find jobs or receive promotions in federal civil service.

Speaking to a meeting of the Federal Regional Council in Kansas City, Ron Jensen said that the combined effect of seven bills currently before Congress would violate the spirit of the federal age discrimination in employment act, which prohibits the use of age qualifications to limit a worker's hiring, firing and conditions of employment.

Jensen told the panel that retirement should be a flexible process which allows for biological as well as chronological age. He suggested that it should be possible for an individual to taper off from fulltime professional employment through parttime work or beginning a second career.

Managements Of 2 GM Plants Are Combined

Cincinnati (AP) — General Motors Corp. announced Tuesday it had combined the managements of both the Chevrolet and Fisher Body assembly plants in suburban Norwood and the United Auto Workers demanded a renegotiation of contracts for 4,900 workers.

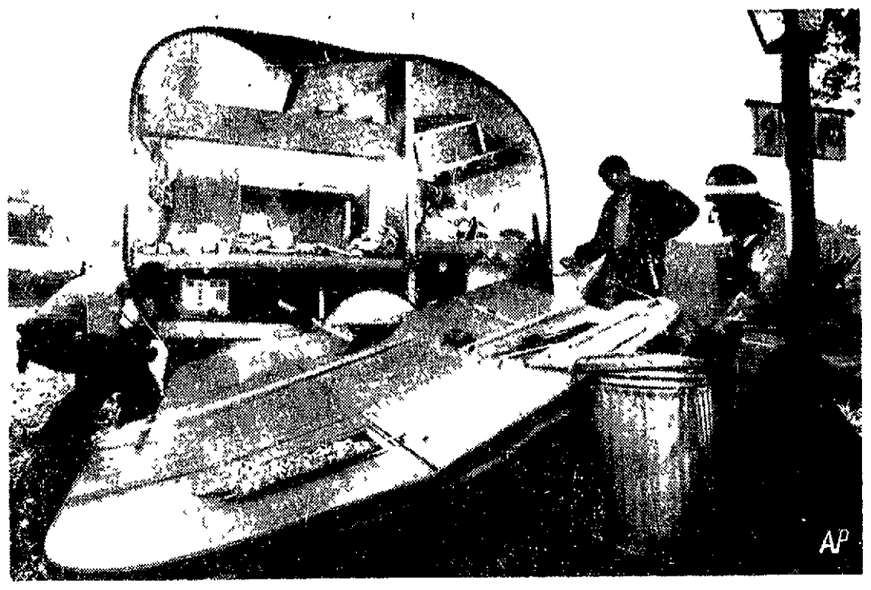

In an announcement by James Roache, GM president, Sidney Roache, was named manager of the combined plants which will be called General Motors Assembly Division (GMAD).

The adjacent plants produce Pontiac Firebirds and Chevrolet Camaros.

Richard Minton, president of Local 674 UAW said existing union contracts were negotiated separately with Chevrolet and with Fisher Body. He said his union had notified the new management that a new contract was sought.

Ford Plans Mill

Detroit (AP) — Ford Motor Co. announced it will begin building a new hot strip steel mill at its Rouge complex in suburban Dearborn later this year. Completion is scheduled in late 1974.

EARLY EXPLOSION DAMAGES TRAILER

Construction worker Kenneth Theel, 39, of Brandon, S.D., remains in critical condition in St. Mary's Hospital in Rochester, Minn., with 1st, 2nd and 3rd-degree burns over 40% of his body after an explosion that blew the sides out of his camper-trailer near Marion, Minn. He reportedly was lighting a liquid propane gas stove when the explosion occurred.

House OKs Funds For HEW, Labor

©The New York Times

Washington — The House passed Tuesday night by a vote of 372 to 25 an appropriations bill which would give the Department of Health, Education and Welfare about $447 million more than President Nixon's proposed budget for the 1972 fiscal year.

Passage came after 8 p.m., following the introduction of eight amendments only two of which were passed.

The largest of the two successful amendments was presented by Rep. Robert N. Giamo, D-Conn., to add $82 million to federal rehabilitation programs. This amendment, which would increase federal support for vocational rehabilitation programs, was supported by over 20 groups concerned with problems of the handicapped. Its purpose is to provide additional rehabilitation services and facilities.

The largest single appropriation in the bill was more than $11.4 billion for grants to states for public assistance under the social and rehabilitation service.

The other amendment passed by the House was a $14 million increase asked by Rep. Paul G. Rogers, D-Fla., to provide additional funds for Public Health Service hospitals and clinics. The Nixon administration has sought to close the eight remaining public health service hospitals and a larger number of clinics. Rogers said he was introducing his amendment to forstall any such move.

An amendment package that would have added about $200 million primarily to the funds for health research and related uses was defeated.

The appropriation bill passed tonight is the largest under consideration by the House for anything other than defense. It would provide about $20.4 billion for the Departments of Labor, Health Education and Welfare and related agencies. Of this, about $18.9 billion would go for most of the major programs of HEW. Labor would get about $1.3 billion.

The bill must now go to the Senate for consideration. Following that it is expected that a House-Senate conference will work out a final version to be sent to the President.

Almost all of the debate on the bill was concerned with the funding of provisions for health care including rehabilitation and health related research.

In its report, the House subcommittee which drafted the bill was sharply critical of the Nixon administration for failure to request more money for health in its proposed budget. The criticism was particularly sharp concerning the proposed budget for the national institutes of health, the federal government's main agency for the conduct and support of biomedical research.

Roller Skating Support Urged

The Lincoln Chamber of Commerce has urged Lincoln residents to turn out and support the event which has made Lincoln the roller skating capital of North America.

Harry Seward, chamber president, said the Roller Skating Rink Operators Association (RSROA), sponsors of the national roller skating championship, expect more than 1,300 skaters and nearly 5,000 persons in the city during the July 26-August 5 contest.

Lao Funds Stolen

Bangkok (UPI) — Police said a man on a motorcycle escaped with a box containing $60,000 in Laotian government funds he took from in front of the customs building at Bangkok's Don Muang airport. The money was en route to a bank in Switzerland, they said.

Man Charged With Embezzlement, Making False Report Of Robbery

Burton LeBow, 42, of 5630 Walker Drive, was charged Tuesday in Lancaster County Court with embezzlement of funds from the Veteran's Thrift Store at 1745 O and with making a false report of an alleged armed robbery.

LeBow, who was employed as the store's manager, pleaded innocent to the misdemeanor charge of a false report and trial was set for Aug. 11.

Preliminary hearing on the felony charge of embezzlement against LeBow was also set for Aug. 11, and the defendant requested a court-appointed attorney

Acting County Judge Raymond Calkins permitted LeBow to withdraw a plea guilty on the misdemeanor charge after the defendant stated he was under the impression that no embezzlement charge would be brought against him.

Calkins set appearance bonds at $2,500 on the felony charge and $100 on the misdemeanor

Dividend Given By Fleming Co.

The board of directors of the Fleming Co. declared a third quarter dividend of 12.5 cents per share of common stock, payable Sept. 10 to shareholders of record Aug. 20.

The company recently reported a 13.5% gain in net earnings for the 12-week period ended July 10. Net earnings were $1,143,015 compared with $1,007,342 for the same period in 1970. Net sales were $174,116,929, up 4.4% for the period.

Black Militant Angela Davis Enters A Plea Of Innocent

San Rafael, Calif. (AP) — Black militant Angela Davis formally pleaded innocent Tuesday to murder, kidnap and conspiracy charges. The judge set her trial to begin in 60 days.

"I plead not guilty," said Miss Davis, her arms folded as she stood before Superior Court Judge Richard E. Arnason.

Just before the plea, the judge handed Miss Davis a legal victory by granting her permission to have the powers of a defense attorney in her own trial.

Arnason said this was rarely granted but he felt "the cause of justice will be served."

He said the court may revoke the privilege if it appears she abuses it.

The judge denied defense requests to dismiss a grand jury indictment against her on grounds there was damaging pretrial publicity and that the grand jury was prejudiced. However, he set a pretrial hearing next Monday allowing the defense a chance to present what it says is evidence that judges who selected the 19-man county grand jury did not do so impersonally.

Arnason said defense attorneys may interview the selector judges at this hearing.

Miss Davis, 27, is charged in connection with the Aug. 7 Marin County courthouse gunbattle in which a judge and three others were slain. She is not accused of being present, but of furnishing guns used in an abortive escape attempt and helping plot the crime.

Eight Infants Are Injured

Hamm, Germany (AP) —An unknown assailant, apparently using karate blows, fractured the skulls of four infants and broke the arms of four others in the maternity ward of the Hamm Hospital, police reported Tuesday.

A hospital spokesman said the injuries, some of them discovered about 12 hours after the assault, were not critical, but that one of the infaants may be left with irrepairable damage.

Police said the attack must have come late Saturday night when the nurse in charge of the ward was called away on a premature birth. When the next nurse took over Sunday, she noticed the first of the injured babies that were between four hours and 10 days old.

During the course of the day, the other injuries were discovered. A spokesman for the district attorney in nearby Dortmund said this was not unusual because of the continuous crying in most maternity wards. He added the assailant left no open wounds on his victims.

The spokesman said there was no immediate clue as to the assailant.

800,000 Dogs Stray

Mexico City (AP) — About 60 cases of rabies are reported each month in this city of eight million, where one-quarter of the 800,000 dogs are strays, officials said.

The Lincoln Country Club, one of the, if not the, toughest golf courses in the state, beginning today and lasting through Saturday will see a variety of golf abilities and lack of same as the 64th annual Nebraska Men's State Amateur Championship is contested over its 6,177 yards.

That's 6,177 yards if you hit the ball straight. If you don't it can be much longer than that.

If you can hit the little ball, particularly with the driver, the way host pro Bud Williamson does, you can use that big club on all but the par 3s, plus No. 1. You'll be able to tell the dummies from those who have a chance to make the 36-hole cut by watching the club they pull from the bag on the first tee.

Those pulling out a driver go into the "dummy" pile and it's a surer bet than Bold Accent at the State Fairgrounds that when they tee it up on the second tee, they'll be hoping to get back to even par some day.

Those who don't hit the driver as straight as does Bud Williamson are advised to (1) break it into at least three pieces before leaving the house, (2) loan it to their wife anl tell her to go play Holmes Park with it, or (3) have Bud lock it up and not return it to you until after the tournament is completed.

Roy Wythers once won the Lincoln City Tournament at the Lincoln Country Club using only a 1-iron off the tee.

Substitute Some Tools

The average golfer might find several other items more desirable to have in his golf bag than a driver. Since you are limited to 14 items (clubs), here's a suggestion list of what to bring:

Hatchet—You might find this an invaluable tool on holes Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, and 18. Trees can come into play only on the aforementioned holes at the LCC layout. The only place you may not need it is on the practice putting green.

No. 3 wood—You can use it to get started with on most holes, including No. 12, a 224-yard, par-3.

No. 4 wood—The tool to use on No. 1 if you're a gambler.

Ladder — Take this along instead of a 1-iron since most amateurs don't know how to hit a 1-iron anyway and you'll find this helpful when you want to shinny up the tree guarding the right front of the No. 1 green to shear off those nasty limbs hanging over the fairway. It'll also be valuable in getting over the fences to retrieve those balls you faded (that's what some duffers refer to as a slice) over the fences on Nos. 3, 4, 15, 16 and 17.

Saw — Substitute this for a No. 2 iron as there may be times when you won't want to waste the time it takes to use the hatchet to clear a path for your next shot. Particularly valuable if you want to remove more than one tree on any hole. Your fellow competitors will appreciate your thoughtfulness in not holding them up too long.

Something For Caddy

Life Preserver — Leave the 3-iron home and bring this for your caddy to wear when you send him into swimming pool to left of 18th fairway to retrieve your last ball so that you may complete the round. If you're now wondering why it will be your last ball, you'll not wonder after you've played the first 17 holes.

Nos. 4, 5 and 6 irons — These are clubs you can legitimately use for second shots if your 3-wood tee shots are decent.

Scythe — With the rough having been allowed to grow, some may need this to find their ball and after finding it, others may need this tool to clear things away to be able to hit it.

Compass — Any Boy Scout will tell you that this is a necessity when you venture into a forest.

No. 9 iron — Having left out the 7-and-8-irons for the scythe and the compass, you'd better have one of these.

Wedge — Perhaps the club you'll use most because that's about all that'll get you out of the rough.

Sandwiches (at least 2) — With all the trouble on the course, you're very apt to miss a meal while trying to complete your round in less than six hours. Sandwiches do not count against the club limit.

Putter — Eventually you're going to need this — eventually.

Sanders Crashes Gals' Room

By HAL BROWN
Star Sports Editor

Geneva — Dapper Doug Sanders, who admits to nearly everything that's been written about his reputation as a playboy, has chased girls all over the country, but it wasn't until he came to Geneva Tuesday that he successfully "crashed" a gals' locker room.

The "crashing" occurred after Sanders had played an 18-hole golf exhibition at the Hidden Hills Country Club here and club manager Morrie Crawford, figuring the gals' locker room, a bit more plush than is the men's, turned it over to Sanders for his post-golf shower.

The 37-year-old Sanders, as well known for his bright, colorful golf ensembles and his short backswing as for his PGA tour victories, hedged a bit when asked if his playboy reputation might have been a bit overplayed by the press.

The reason for his hedging a bit, he admitted, was because he wants to keep peace in the family with his third wife.

"But I do enjoy life," he pointed out. "I don't live every day like it were going to be the last one — you can't do that or some day it will be the last one —but I do like to have fun."

Asked if it were possible to enjoy the playboy role to the hilt and still win on the tough PGA tour, Sanders didn't blink an eye in replying:

"Well, I think when I was single, I came as close to playing that role all the way as it's possible to do — and I still won a few tournaments and made some money."

But he emphasizes that was when he was single. However, to the gallery at Geneva Tuesday, he still showed he likes to have fun.

He joked with the gallery throughout the afternoon, pointing out, for instance, "I think this is the second windiest place in the world. The first one blew away.

Or, eyeing young Marc Cruse, the 18-year-old Geneva amateur, who played in the foursome with Sanders, Hastings pro Bud Williamson Jr. and Lincoln Holmes Park pro Bob Schuchart, observing, "If I had Marc's youth, Arnold Palmer's money and my address book, I'd have it made."

He helped some imbibing members of the gallery out with their drinks, bummed cigarettes from others, helped a young girl finish her bag of popcorn, grabbed a pretty lady by the hand and walked hand-in-hand with her down one fairway, signed numerous autographs and posed for more than a dozen pictures with youngsters.

Oh, yes, he also showed some golf ability, shooting a three-under-par 69 while Williamson turned in a 35-37—72, Schuchart a 38-39—77 and Cruse a 42-42—84.

Sanders played the nine-hole course the first time in even-par 36, bogeying the 435-yard, par-4 first hole and the 170-yard, par-3 eighth, hitting a 7-iron over the green on the latter hole, and birdieing the 297-yard, par-4 sixth win an eight footer and two-putting the 491-yard, par-5 ninth for a birdie after hitting a 5-iron second shot to the green.

On his second trip over the 3,100-yard layout, he two-putted the third and ninth holes, both par-5s, for birdies and sank a 15-footer at No. 2 for his third birdie en route to a 33.

FAIR FUTURITY TODAY

. . . Split Divisions For Fairgrounds Feature

By RANDY EICKHOFF
Star Sports Writer

Nebraska-bred 2-year-olds face the longest test of the racing season today in the running of the State Fair Futurity with 14 entries being split into two divisions for the $3,000-added race.

The 6 furlong chase pits Arian Ray, runnerup to Doodle Bird in the Freshman Stakes, top-weighted at 119 pounds against a field that includes Solar Power, winner in his last race over a field of eight, through 5½ furlongs.

Solar Power will be teamed with the Fairgrounds' leading jockey, Fred Ecoffey, and will be saddled with 112 pounds while Arian Ray will be ridden by Bill Stallings.

The Dervish, runnerup to Solar Power in his last outing, will carry apprentice jockey John Rettele and 108 pounds in the second half of the split division.

Nail Bluff, making a first appearance at the Fairgrounds, brings an outstanding Ak-Sar-Ben win record to the post in the first half of the Futurity, along with top weight of 117 pounds and Ecoffey slated for the irons.

Nail Bluff will face stiff challenges from Return Engagement, who narrowly lost to Essie in one of his last outings.

Essie will be back in the first division again to challenge Return Engagement with 109 pounds and jockey Marvin Coleman.

Other top 2-year-olds in the first half include Gracie C., Jujan, Amiles Duke and Merrigan. The second division brings together Angel Page, Fancy Hands, Hasty Mister, and Tambara.

Ecoffey continued his assault on the Fairgrounds record for the most wins, 48 set by Charles Guinup in 1954, when he rode three winners during Tuesday's racing with Revealing in the first, Prince Kem in the fourth, and Speedy Recovery in the sixth.

Ecoffey now has a total of 42 wins for the season and, with almost two weeks of racing left, seems to have the record well within his grasp.

But in the featured seventh, Ecoffey couldn't make it to the winner's circle as War Issue led wire-to-wire in the mile and 70 affair to give jockey Mervin Kruger his first win of the meeting.

The 4-year-old chestnut gelding jumped to the lead, holding off an early challenge from Ecoffey and Grejay, then stayed safely in front throughout the remainder of the race to return $7.40, $5.40 and $4.40 to backers.

The 4,506 patrons saw the product of Key Issue out of Lady Buster hold off a stiff challenge from highly-favored Gems Package and unsuccessfull bids from Beckon Call and Tonganesian to grab first place laurels.

Beckon Call placed for $6.40 and $5.20 while Tonganesian returned $5.00.

War Issue now boasts a record of five wins, two places and two shows out of eleven starts for owner Maynard Myers of Iowa.

Ali 'Announces' Next Bout For September With Quarry

. . . SCORNS HEAVYWEIGHT KING FRAZIER

Houston (AP) — Muhammad Ali praised Jimmy Ellis, scorned Joe Frazier and announced at a post-fight news conference Tuesday he will fight Jerry Quarry in September.

"The next fight from what I understand — although nothing has been signed — will be Sept. 27 with Jerry Quarry in the Astrodome," said Ali.

The former heavyweight champion, in high spirits after stopping an outclassed Ellis in the 12th and final round in the Dome Monday night, also said he might have a second fight before meeting Frazier again for the title next year.

"I have an offer in England, he said, "but I can't say who. But it's an American. The offer is good."

He said he wants to fight Frazier, to whom he lost a unanimous decision, next March in the Astrodome.

"The Astrodome is ideal," Ali said. "I think a fight so great should be held where as many people as possible can see it. We could draw 100,000 people."

For such a fight, the Astrodome could conceiveably be jammed with 66,000 people, and for such a fight Frazier has been quoted as saying he wants $5 million.

"He talks like an amateur," shouted Ali. "Why does he want $5 million? Why does he think he's such a draw?"

Ali then threw a series of verbal jabs at Frazier.

"He won't wear me down. He won't catch me. Wear me down? He'll be in such pitiful condition he'll have to retire.

"Ellis is a much better boxer than Frazier. Ellis sings better than Frazier.'

Then, with Ellis sitting next to him, Ali said of his former sparring partner and one-time World Boxing Association heavyweight champion:

"Anybody who fought like he fought will be around for a long time to come. He's not washed up."

Also at the news conference was Angelo Dundee, who trained Ali for all of his pro fights before the Ellis match, but who was in Ellis' corner as trainer and manager for the match.

"The strangest thing" said Ali, "was hearing Angelo in the other corner."

"He looked like his old self," said Dundee.

"That's because I had Harry Wiley," retorted Ali.

Wiley took Dundee's place in the Ali camp. Ali said Dundee would rejoin him for future fights.

Ali also criticized the Internal Revenue Service, which said before the fight it was going to attach some of his purse.

"They won't allow me to do what other people do," said Ali. "I'm always having problems. They took $800,000 from the Frazier fight and New York State took $348,000 before I even got my check."

It was not known immediately what Ali's purse, which was $2.5 million for Frazier, would be for Monday night's fight. He was given a guarantee of $450,000 against 45 per cent of all income. Ellis was to receive 20 per cent of all income.

Bob Arum, president of Top Rank Inc., which promoted the fight with Astrodome Championship Enterprises Inc., said a crowd of 31,947 paid a live gate of $298,000.

Arum also said that closed circuit television in the United States and Canada would bring a minimum gross of $1.5 million and a maximum of $2.1 million, with about $300,000 coming from foreign and cable television.

The promoters and the fighters will cut up about $1.25 million, Arum said.

Milton Earns Title In Singles Skating

Ronald Milton, 18-year-old student from Revere, Mass., swept to the men's singles title Tuesday night in the United States International Roller Skating Tournament at Pershing Auditorium.

Ronald, enrolled in Salem State College this fall, will represent the United States in the World Roller Skating Championships at Barcelona, Spain, in September in singles.

His victory made a clean sweep for Massachusetts skaters in the first three events of United States International Competition USIC.

Skating out of Norwood, Mass., Ronald won the singles event at the roller skating championships running here through Aug. 5.

Placing second in the singles event was Daryl Bayles, of Greeley, Colo. Kurt Anselmi, 16, Pontiac, Mich., who won the compulsory figures portion of the singles contest, was third over-all after free-style skating tonight.

Asked about the competitiveness of the men's singles, Ronald said, "I don't try to worry about the field. I just try to skate my best."

Ronald first began skating in competition in 1961. He said he skates four hours daily, five days per week to keep in practice.

Defending singles champion, Mike Jacques, also of Norwood, elected not to defend his USC title this year.

The USC competition was originated by the Roller Skating Rink Operators of America RSROA, who sponsor the national championships in order to qualify American skaters for world competition.

World champion roller skaters Ron and Gail Robovitsky of Detroit won a standing voation and first-place in the mixed pairs event of the United States competition.

Placing second was a Houston, Tex. team Abe Blass, 19, and April Allen, 17. Third was Dennis Collier and Karen Marshall of San Leandro, Calif.

Aunt Priscilla Again Bothered By Weather

That darn old weather makes my arthritis act up a little and a little rain always seems to mean that my favorites run out of the money.

Priscilla

Of course my first choice, Nasty McNarf in the second, must have had just a little too much weight along with Wayne Anderson as the little darling ran out of the money and in the final race, Fred Ecoffey couldn't keep Royal Lake ahead of the crowd.

My $100 spree fund is now $165.80 and I'll try to boost that a little more with $2 win tickets on Olywee Hy in the fifth and Rip To Market in the eighth.

Shelsta, Ray Sign With Omaha Mustangs

Omaha — The Omaha Mustangs have announced the signings of Terry Shelsta and John Ray.

Shelsta, 6-3 and 225 pounds, was an All-District 12 NAIA defensive tackle at Dakota Wesleyan University, while Ray is 5-11 and 190 pounds and played at Omaha Tech and Peru State. He will be used as a wide receiver.

Leave Some Clubs Home

The Lincoln Country Club, one of the, if not the, toughest golf courses in the state, beginning today and lasting through Saturday will see a variety of golf abilities and lack of same as the 64th annual Nebraska Men's State Amateur Championship is contested over its 6,177 yards.

That's 6,177 yards if you hit the ball straight. If you don't it can be much longer than that.

If you can hit the little ball, particularly with the driver, the way host pro Bud Williamson does, you can use that big club on all but the par 3s, plus No. 1. You'll be able to tell the dummies from those who have a chance to make the 36-hole cut by watching the club they pull from the bag on the first tee.

Those pulling out a driver go into the "dummy" pile and it's a surer bet than Bold Accent at the State Fairgrounds that when they tee it up on the second tee, they'll be hoping to get back to even par some day.

Those who don't hit the driver as straight as does Bud Williamson are advised to (1) break it into at least three pieces before leaving the house, (2) loan it to their wife and tell her to go play Holmes Park with it, or (3) have Bud lock it up and not return it to you until after the tournament is completed.

Roy Wythers once won the Lincoln City Tournament at the Lincoln Country Club using only a 1-iron off the tee.

Substitute Some Tools

The average golfer might find several other items more desirable to have in his golf bag than a driver. Since you are limited to 14 items (clubs), here's a suggestion list of what to bring:

Hatchet—You might find this an invaluable tool on holes Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, and 18. Trees can come into play only on the aforementioned holes at the LCC layout. The only place you may not need it is on the practice putting green.

No. 3 wood—You can use it to get started with on most holes, including No. 12, a 224-yard, par-3.

No. 4 wood—The tool to use on No. 1 if you're a gambler.

Ladder — Take this along instead of a 1-iron since most amateurs don't know how to hit a 1-iron anyway and you'll find this helpful when you want to shinny up the tree guarding the right front of the No. 1 green to shear off those nasty limbs hanging over the fairway. It'll also be valuable in getting over the fences to retrieve those balls you faded (that's what some duffers refer to as a slice) over the fences on Nos. 3, 4, 15, 16 and 17.

Saw — Substitute this for a No. 2 iron as there may be times when you won't want to waste the time it takes to use the hatchet to clear a path for your next shot. Particularly valuable if you want to remove more than one tree on any hole. Your fellow competitors will appreciate your thoughtfulness in not holding them up too long.

Something For Caddy

Life Preserver — Leave the 3-iron home and bring this for your caddy to wear when you send him into swimming pool to left of 18th fairway to retrieve your last ball so that you may complete the round. If you're now wondering why it will be your last ball, you'll not wonder after you've played the first 17 holes.

Nos. 4, 5 and 6 irons — These are clubs you can legitimately use for second shots if your 3-wood tee shots are decent.

Scythe — With the rough having been allowed to grow, some may need this to find their ball and after finding it, others may need this tool to clear things away to be able to hit it.

Compass — Any Boy Scout will tell you that this is a necessity when you venture into a forest.

No. 9 iron — Having left out the 7- and 8-irons for the scythe and the compass, you'd better have one of these.

Wedge — Perhaps the club you'll use most because that's about all that'll get you out of the rough.

Sandwiches (at least 2) — With all the trouble on the course, you're very apt to miss a meal while trying to complete your round in less than six hours. Sandwiches do not count against the club limit.

Putter — Eventually you're going to need this — eventually.

Sanders Crashes Gals' Room

By HAL BROWN
Star Sports Editor

Geneva — Dapper Doug Sanders, who admits to nearly everything that's been written about his reputation as a playboy, has chased girls all over the country, but it wasn't until he came to Geneva Tuesday that he successfully "crashed" a gals' locker room.

The "crashing" occurred after Sanders had played an 18-hole golf exhibition at the Hidden Hills Country Club here and club manager Morrie Crawford, figuring the gals' locker room, a bit more plush than is the men's, turned it over to Sanders for his post-golf shower.

The 37-year-old Sanders, as well known for his bright, colorful golf ensembles and his short backswing as for his PGA tour victories, hedged a bit when asked if his playboy reputation might have been a bit overplayed by the press.

The reason for his hedging a bit, he admitted, was because he wants to keep peace in the family with his third wife.

"But I do enjoy life," he pointed out. "I don't live every day like it were going to be the last one — you can't do that or some day it will be the last one —but I do like to have fun."

Asked if it were possible to enjoy the playboy role to the hilt and still win on the tough PGA tour, Sanders didn't blink an eye in replying:

"Well, I think when I was single, I came as close to playing that role all the way as it's possible to do — and I still won a few tournaments and made some money."

But he emphasizes that was when he was single. However, to the gallery at Geneva Tuesday, he still showed he likes to have fun.

He joked with the gallery throughout the afternoon, pointing out, for instance, "I think this is the second windiest place in the world. The first one blew away.

Or, eyeing young Marc Cruse, the 18-year-old Geneva amateur, who played in the foursome with Sanders, Hastings pro Bud Williamson Jr. and Lincoln Holmes Park pro Bob Schuchart, observing, "If I had Marc's youth, Arnold Palmer's money and my address book, I'd have it made."

He helped some imbibing members of the gallery out with their drinks, bummed cigarettes from others, helped a young girl finish her bag of popcorn, grabbed a pretty lady by the hand and walked hand-in-hand with her down one fairway, signed numerous autographs and posed for more than a dozen pictures with youngsters.

Oh, yes, he also showed some golf ability, shooting a three-under-par 69 while Williamson turned in a 35-37—72, Schuchart a 38-39—77 and Cruse a 42-42—84.

Sanders played the nine-hole course the first time in even-par 36, bogeying the 435-yard, par-4 first hole and the 170-yard, par-3 eighth, hitting a 7-iron over the green on the latter hole, and birdieing the 297-yard, par-4 sixth win an eight footer and two-putting the 491-yard, par-5 ninth for a birdie after hitting a 5-iron second shot to the green.

On his second trip over the 3,100-yard layout, he two-putted the third and ninth holes, both par-5s, for birdies and sank a 15-footer at No. 2 for his third birdie en route to a 33.

FAIR FUTURITY TODAY

. . . Split Divisions For Fairgrounds Feature

By RANDY EICKHOFF
Star Sports Writer

Nebraska-bred 2-year-olds face the longest test of the racing season today in the running of the State Fair Futurity with 14 entries being split into two divisions for the $3,000-added race.

The 6 furlong chase pits Arian Ray, runnerup to Doodle Bird in the Freshman Stakes, top-weighted at 119 pounds against a field that includes Solar Power, winner in his last race over a field of eight, through 5½ furlongs.

Solar Power will be teamed with the Fairgrounds' leading jockey, Fred Ecoffey, and will be saddled with 112 pounds while Arian Ray will be ridden by Bill Stallings.

The Dervish, runnerup to Solar Power in his last outing, will carry apprentice jockey John Rettele and 108 pounds in the second half of the split division.

Nail Bluff, making a first appearance at the Fairgrounds, brings an outstanding Ak-Sar-Ben win record to the post in the first half of the Futurity, along with top weight of 117 pounds and Ecoffey slated for the irons.

Nail Bluff will face stiff challenges from Return Engagement, who narrowly lost to Essie in one of his last outings.

Essie will be back in the first division again to challenge Return Engagement with 109 pounds and jockey Marvin Coleman.

Other top 2-year-olds in the first half include Gracie C., Jujan, Amiles Duke and Merrigan. The second division brings together Angel Page, Fancy Hands, Hasty Mister, and Tambara.

Ecoffey continued his assault on the Fairgrounds record for the most wins, 48 set by Charles Guinup in 1954, when he rode three winners during Tuesday's racing with Revealing in the first, Prince Kem in the fourth, and Speedy Recovery in the sixth.

Ecoffey now has a total of 42 wins for the season and, with almost two weeks of racing left, seems to have the record well within his grasp.

But in the featured seventh, Ecoffey couldn't make it to the winner's circle as War Issue led wire-to-wire in the mile and 70 affair to give jockey Mervin Kruger his first win of the meeting.

The 4-year-old chestnut gelding jumped to the lead, holding off an early challenge from Ecoffey and Grejay, then stayed safely in front throughout the remainder of the race to return $7.40, $5.40 and $4.40 to backers.

The 4,506 patrons saw the product of Key Issue out of Lady Buster hold off a stiff challenge from highly-favored Gems Package and unsuccessfull bids from Beckon Call and Tonganesian to grab first place laurels.

Beckon Call placed for $6.40 and $5.20 while Tonganesian returned $5.00.

War Issue now boasts a record of five wins, two places and two shows out of eleven starts for owner Maynard Myers of Iowa.

Ali 'Announces' Next Bout For September With Quarry

. . . SCORNS HEAVYWEIGHT KING FRAZIER

Houston (AP) — Muhammad Ali praised Jimmy Ellis, scorned Joe Frazier and announced at a post-fight news conference Tuesday he will fight Jerry Quarry in September.

"The next fight from what I understand — although nothing has been signed — will be Sept. 27 with Jerry Quarry in the Astrodome," said Ali.

The former heavyweight champion, in high spirits after stopping an outclassed Ellis in the 12th and final round in the Dome Monday night, also said he might have a second fight before meeting Frazier again for the title next year.

"I have an offer in England, he said, "but I can't say who. But it's an American. The offer is good."

He said he wants to fight Frazier, to whom he lost a unanimous decision, next March in the Astrodome.

"The Astrodome is ideal," Ali said. "I think a fight so great should be held where as many people as possible can see it. We could draw 100,000 people."

For such a fight, the Astrodome could conceiveably be jammed with 66,000 people, and for such a fight Frazier has been quoted as saying he wants $5 million.

"He talks like an amateur," shouted Ali. "Why does he want $5 million? Why does he think he's such a draw?"

Ali then threw a series of verbal jabs at Frazier.

"He won't wear me down. He won't catch me. Wear me down? He'll be in such pitiful condition he'll have to retire.

"Ellis is a much better boxer than Frazier. Ellis sings better than Frazier.'

Then, with Ellis sitting next to him, Ali said of his former sparring partner and one-time World Boxing Association heavyweight champion:

"Anybody who fought like he fought will be around for a long time to come. He's not washed up."

Also at the news conference was Angelo Dundee, who trained Ali for all of his pro fights before the Ellis match, but who was in Ellis' corner as trainer and manager for the match.

"The strangest thing" said Ali, "was hearing Angelo in the other corner."

"He looked like his old self," said Dundee.

"That's because I had Harry Wiley," retorted Ali.

Wiley took Dundee's place in the Ali camp. Ali said Dundee would rejoin him for future fights.

Ali also criticized the Internal Revenue Service, which said before the fight it was going to attach some of his purse.

"They won't allow me to do what other people do," said Ali. "I'm always having problems. They took $800,000 from the Frazier fight and New York State took $348,000 before I even got my check."

It was not known immediately what Ali's purse, which was $2.5 million for Frazier, would be for Monday night's fight. He was given a guarantee of $450,000 against 45 per cent of all income. Ellis was to receive 20 per cent of all income.

Bob Arum, president of Top Rank Inc., which promoted the fight with Astrodome Championship Enterprises Inc., said a crowd of 31,947 paid a live gate of $298,000.

Arum also said that closed circuit television in the United States and Canada would bring a minimum gross of $1.5 million and a maximum of $2.1 million, with about $300,000 coming from foreign and cable television.

The promoters and the fighters will cut up about $1.25 million, Arum said.

Milton Earns Title In Singles Skating

Ronald Milton, 18-year-old student from Revere, Mass., swept to the men's singles title Tuesday night in the United States International Roller Skating Tournament at Pershing Auditorium.

Ronald, enrolled in Salem State College this fall, will represent the United States in the World Roller Skating Championships at Barcelona, Spain, in September in singles.

His victory made a clean sweep for Massachusetts skaters in the first three events of United States International Competition USIC.

Skating out of Norwood, Mass., Ronald won the singles event at the roller skating championships running here through Aug. 5.

Placing second in the singles event was Daryl Bayles, of Greeley, Colo. Kurt Anselmi, 16, Pontiac, Mich., who won the compulsory figures portion of the singles contest, was third over-all after free-style skating tonight.

Asked about the competitiveness of the men's singles, Ronald said, "I don't try to worry about the field. I just try to skate my best."

Ronald first began skating in competition in 1961. He said he skates four hours daily, five days per week to keep in practice.

Defending singles champion, Mike Jacques, also of Norwood, elected not to defend his USC title this year.

The USC competition was originated by the Roller Skating Rink Operators of America RSROA, who sponsor the national championships in order to qualify American skaters for world competition.

World champion roller skaters Ron and Gail Rebovitsky of Detroit won a standing voation and first-place in the mixed pairs event of the United States competition.

Placing second was a Houston, Tex. team Abe Blass, 19, and April Allen, 17. Third was Dennis Collier and Karen Marshall of San Leandro, Calif.

Aunt Priscilla Again Bothered By Weather

That darn old weather makes my arthritis act up a little and a little rain always seems to mean that my favorites run out of the money.

Priscilla

Of course my first choice, Nasty McNarf in the second, must have had just a little too much weight along with Wayne Anderson as the little darling ran out of the money and in the final race, Fred Ecoffey couldn't keep Royal Lake ahead of the crowd.

My $100 spree fund is now $165.80 and I'll try to boost that a little more with $2 win tickets on Olywee Hy in the fifth and Rip To Market in the eighth.

Boozer Headlines Camp At Chadron

Bob Boozer, former Kansas State University all-American and an 11-year pro, will headline the coaching staff at the annual Milwaukee Bucks Basketball Camp that opens Sunday at Chadron State College. The week-long session is expected to draw about 60 boys from Nebraska Wyoming and South Dakota.

Also on the staff will be Tom Nissalke, former assistant coach of the Bucks who recently signed as head coach of the Dallas Chaparrals of American Basketball Association. Assisting Boozer and Nissalke will be four high school cage coaches, Jerry Ecklund of Chadron High, Jay Mumaa of Schuyler, Don Martin of Hoxie, Kan., and Dennis Crawford of Sutherland.

Fremont Slams Lincolnites Twice

Fremont captured both the Legion and Midget games against Lincoln teams in Tuesday night action at Sherman Field.

The Legion invaders scored six runs in the eighth inning and pitcher Tim Mack held off Lincoln Mutual Life, 8-2, paced by Gordie Echtenkamp's three hits.

In Midget action, Fremont blanked the Thunderbolts, 2-0. as Mike Ray and Verlyn Eden combined for the two-hit shutout.

Devine Releases Former Tiger

Green Bay, Wis. (AP) — Green Bay Packer coach and general manager Dan Devine cut five players Tuesday, reducing the squad to 67 members, including 44 veterans.

Cut were running back Jim Maier, free agent from St. Norbert; running back Jack Martin, 13th round draft choice from San Angelo State; defensive back Glenn Williams, free agent from Boston University; kicker Dewey Graham, free agent from Maryland; and kicker Henry Brown, free agent from Missouri.

Bailey, Reed Ready For Omaha Fights

Omaha — The last two preliminary fights on the Ron Stander-Jack O'Halloran professional fight card scheduled for the Omaha Civic Auditorium on Thursday were announced Tuesday by the Cornhusker Boxing Club.

In a six-rounder veteran heavyweight Lou Bailey will face Cleveland's Joey Ray. In Bailey's last appearance in Omaha he won a six round decision over Alanzo Harris.

Last year's 165 pound Midwest Golden Gloves champion Michael Reed will make his professional debut against Des Moines' Frank Formaro in a four-rounder.

Officials Report Leahy Improved

Portland, Ore. (AP) — Frank Leahy is much improved and the former Notre Dame football coach's condition is no longer serious, hospital officials said Tuesday.

The former Omahan has been at St. Vincent Hospital since July 15. He underwent surgery for removal of fatty tissue interfering with the functions of the kidneys and liver.

Leahy, 62, was head football coach for 11 years at Notre Dame, directing the school to four national titles before stepping down in 1953.

NBC Plans Daily Children's Shows

The New York Times

New York — With the announcement Tuesday that it was planning a new series of daily half-hour children's programs for early 1972, the National Broadcasting Company has taken a major step toward meeting the objections of critics of TV fare for children.

Julian Goodman, NBC's president, said the new Monday-through Friday programs would be aimed at children from 3 to 6 and would present a balanced format of educational and entertainment material, with the primary accent on learning. While production details still have to be worked out, the series will also be designed to involve parents in a shared-experience with their children.

The series, which has been in development for several months, will not be available for network sale. Instead, it will be designed for distribution to the network's more than 200 affiliated stations for scheduling at a time to be selected by each participating station.

Each station will be afforded two two-minute positions for commercials or public service announcements, one near the beginning and one near the end of each program. With the elimination of network commercials, this will permit a reduction of two minutes from the usual daytime commercial structure and will permit longer segments of uninterrupted program material.

Local stations carrying the programs will pay the network a "program service charge" to help offset what NBC calls its "substantial production costs," but, in return, they will be permitted to retain all revenue from the local sales. The service charge, a spokesman said, will not be a flat rate, but will vary with the size and audience of the station.

NBC plans to feed the series daily to its affiliates over regular lines when they are not in service.

Although schedules are not yet definite, the programs probably will be carried by the network's own stations in New York, Washington and Cleveland at 1 p.m., in Los Angeeles at 3 p.m. and in Chicago at 3:30 p.m.

The move, while only the latest in a series of steps NBC has taken in recent years to upgrade its children's programing, probably comes closest to meeting some of the major demands of its most persistent critics.

Both Action for Children's Television, a national organization of parents and professionals, and the National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting have urged similar reforms at all three networks and before the Federal Communications Commission although both have asked for a great deal more than NBC will provide with its new series.

In general, ACT's petition to the FCC calls for 14 hours a week of children's programming on all three networks, the elimination of all advertising, programming for specific age groups instead of for all children and programing at times when children will be watching, instead of only on Saturday mornings.

Big Microscope Can Miniaturize

Paris — With special film, the world's largest electron microscope, just going into operation in France, can be used in reverse as a sort of superminiaturizing camera, reducing a page of type to a nearly invisible dot.

All the books in the U.S. Library of Congress could be reduced to a single 8-by10-inch sheet of paper, transferred to microtape and later displayed, page by page, on a television screen.

Family Planning Averts 5.2 Million Births In India

New Delhi (AP) — India's family planning program averted 5.2 million births until 1969, Health Minister B. S. Murthy said in parliament.

India's population on Aug. 1, 1970, stood at 550,569,000, an official release said.

The population is increasingly by a little more than one million a month.

'Fat City' To Be Filmed By Huston

Stockton, Calif. (AP) — Photography has started on "Fat City," a Rastar Production for Columbia Pictures starring Stacy Keach and Jeff Bridges.

John Huston is directing the film version of the story which concerns two young boxers in an impoverished area. It marks author Leonard Gardner's first screenplay.

Legends Explain 'Pumpernickel'

New York (AP) — One of the legends of bread concerns pumpernickel, Germany's famous black bread.

It may have been named when a traveling Frenchman tried some and pronounced it "bon pour Nicol," or "good for Nicol," as he called his horse.

There is also the one about Turkish bakers, when caught adding fillers to their flour, being nailed by the ears to their shops.

Interruptions Resented

Toronto (AP) — Future generations may be unhappy because their mothers resented having to interrupt their careers to have babies, social anthropologist Lionel Tiger warned.

Judge Denies He Took Bribes From Mobster

New York (AP) — A state Supreme Court justice accused before a U.S. Senate subcommittee last week of taking two $25,000 bribes denied the charge in a written statement Tuesday.

Justice Mitchell D. Schweitzer, who is being investigated by the state Court on the Judiciary, also declined an invitation to appear before the subcommittee, which is investigating organized crime.

His attorneys have advised him that an appearance now would be "inappropriate" in view of the judiciary probe, said Schweitzer.

A witness, later identified by newspapers as Michael Raymond of Coral Gables, Fla., told the subcommittee in Washington that he had bribed the judge in 1955 and in 1961 to obtain a light sentence and favored parole treatment in stock fraud convictions.

The witness testified under an assumed name "George White."

"After reading the newspaper accounts of the testimony of a long-time criminal now identified as Michael Raymond," said Schweitzer, "I can only say that I categorically deny each and every statement he made about indirectly bribing me through an intermediary."

When the allegations were made in Washington, U.S. Attorney Whitney North Seymour Jr. and Manhattan Dist. Atty. Frank S. Hogan launched separate probes of the charges.

Sen. John D. McClellan, D-Ark., the subcommittee chairman, said his invitation stands, adding, "We are trying to be just as fair as we can be to all of these people."

Schweitzer's lawyer, Charles Stillman, described the judge as "outraged and hurt" by the rackets committee decision to allow testimony by the admitted stock manipulator.

Stillman said Schweitzer had not thought of removing himself from the bench and was preparing to testify should the state Court of the Judiciary schedule a hearing.

That court has been investigating, since January, Schweitzer's relationship with Nathan Voloshen, an acquaintance of former House Speaker John McCormack and a convicted influence-peddler.

The results of the investigation are expected by the end of September.

Stillman said Schweitzer would return to the bench as scheduled next Monday.

Police Free Man Who Admitted Past Murder

Memphis, Tenn. (UPI) — A man who told police he killed his best friend 28 years ago and begged for punishment was freed Tuesday on the grounds the shooting was an accident.

"Please charge me with murder. I killed a man," he begged.

"We told him he had had his trial and was absolved," said one policeman, who refused to identify the 56-year-old man since he was not charged.

The bizarre incident began Sunday when the man walked into the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation's Chattanooga office and said he wanted to confess to a 28-year-old murder. The Chattanooga agent said the man had traveled from Alabama and was determined to go to Memphis to confess the crime.

But authorities said there wasn't enough evidence to charge the man, and at first disregarded the story. But after the man showed up in Memphis Monday morning and gave a detailed account of the story, they believed him.

A check with microfilm records revealed the slaying on May 7, 1943 of a Fred Williams at a Memphis used car lot. Officers at the time said they questioned the unidentified man, but the shooting was ruled an accident, and the whole matter forgotten.

The man said he was in shock for several months after the incident and has spent the intervening years wandering from one mental institution to another.

"The man has been punished enough," said the policeman.

NBC Plans Daily Children's Shows

The New York Times

New York — With the announcement Tuesday that it was planning a new series of daily half-hour children's programs for early 1972, the National Broadcasting Company has taken a major step toward meeting the objections of critics of TV fare for children.

Julian Goodman, NBC's president, said the new Monday-through Friday programs would be aimed at children from 3 to 6 and would present a balanced format of educational and entertainment material, with the primary accent on learning. While production details still have to be worked out, the series will also be designed to involve parents in a shared-experience with their children.

The series, which has been in development for several months, will not be available for network sale. Instead, it will be designed for distribution to the network's more than 200 affiliated stations for scheduling at a time to be selected by each participating station.

Each station will be afforded two two-minute positions for commercials or public service announcements, one near the beginning and one near the end of each program. With the elimination of network commercials, this will permit a reduction of two minutes from the usual daytime commercial structure and will permit longer segments of uninterrupted program material.

Local stations carrying the programs will pay the network a "program service charge" to help offset what NBC calls its "substantial production costs," but, in return, they will be permitted to retain all revenue from the local sales. The service charge, a spokesman said, will not be a flat rate, but will vary with the size and audience of the station.

NBC plans to feed the series daily to its affiliates over regular lines when they are not in service.

Although schedules are not yet definite, the programs probably will be carried by the network's own stations in New York, Washington and Cleveland at 1 p.m., in Los Angeeles at 3 p.m. and in Chicago at 3:30 p.m.

The move, while only the latest in a series of steps NBC has taken in recent years to upgrade its children's programing, probably comes closest to meeting some of the major demands of its most persistent critics.

Both Action for Children's Television, a national organization of parents and professionals, and the National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting have urged similar reforms at all three networks and before the Federal Communications Commission although both have asked for a great deal more than NBC will provide with its new series.

In general, ACT's petition to the FCC calls for 14 hours a week of children's programming on all three networks, the elimination of all advertising, programming for specific age groups instead of for all children and programing at times when children will be watching, instead of only on Saturday mornings.

Big Microscope Can Miniaturize

Paris — With special film, the world's largest electron microscope, just going into operation in France, can be used in reverse as a sort of superminiaturizing camera, reducing a page of type to a nearly invisible dot.

All the books in the U.S. Library of Congress could be reduced to a single 8-by10-inch sheet of paper, transferred to microtape and later displayed, page by page, on a television screen.

Family Planning Averts 5.2 Million Births In India

New Delhi (AP) — India's family planning program averted 5.2 million births until 1969, Health Minister B. S. Murthy said in parliament.

India's population on Aug. 1, 1970, stood at 550,569,000, an official release said.

The population is increasingly by a little more than one million a month.

'Fat City' To Be Filmed By Huston

Stockton, Calif. (AP) — Photography has started on "Fat City," a Rastar Production for Columbia Pictures starring Stacy Keach and Jeff Bridges.

John Huston is directing the film version of the story which concerns two young boxers in an impoverished area. It marks author Leonard Gardner's first screenplay.

Legends Explain 'Pumpernickel'

New York (AP) — One of the legends of bread concerns pumpernickel, Germany's famous black bread.

It may have been named when a traveling Frenchman tried some and pronounced it "bon pour Nicol," or "good for Nicol," as he called his horse.

There is also the one about Turkish bakers, when caught adding fillers to their flour, being nailed by the ears to their shops.

Interruptions Resented

Toronto (AP) — Future generations may be unhappy because their mothers resented having to interrupt their careers to have babies, social anthropologist Lionel Tiger warned.

A standard station wagon with the luxury options you deserve can be: (A) Expensive, or (B) An Ambassador wagon from Behlen Motors.

AMBASSADOR SST WAGON

If you've ever shopped for a station wagon, one thing sticks out like a sore thumb. All the standard sized wagons have enough cargo area, but by the time you add all the luxury options you want the price is almost untouchable. And to keep the price down, you do without the extras . . . and end up with a boxcar with tires. Now, Behlen Motors has the solution for you in the form of luxurious new Ambassador wagon that offers you as standard luxury equipment: A 304 CID V-8. Shift-Command automatic transmission. Air-conditioning. Chromed roof rack. Instrument panel with burled walnut inlay. Wheel discs, tinted glass, radio, power steering, visibility group, whitewall tires.

From $4195

AMBASSADOR SST WAGON

If you've ever shopped for a station wagon, one thing sticks out like a sore thumb. All the standard sized wagons have enough cargo area, but by the time you add all the luxury options you want the price is almost untouchable. And to keep the price down, you do without the extras . . . and end up with a boxcar with tires. Now, Behlen Motors has the solution for you in the form of luxurious new Ambassador wagon that offers you as standard luxury equipment: A 304 CID V-8. Shift-Command automatic transmission. Air-conditioning. Chromed roof rack. Instrument panel with burled walnut inlay. Wheel discs, tinted glass, radio, power steering, visibility group, whitewall tires.

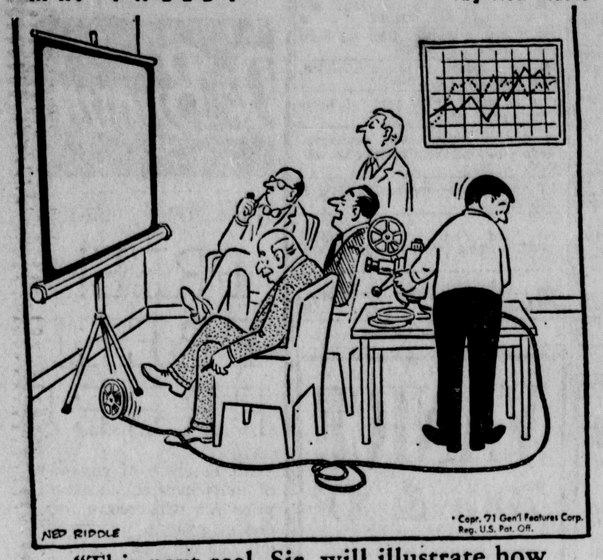

From $4195

Here is a practical little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is six or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add three. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures gives you.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE

Here's How to Work It

One letter simply stands for another in this example, A is used for the three L's X for the two O's etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

A X Y D L B A A X R
to L O N G F E L L O W

—Here is a practical little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is six or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add three. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures gives you.
